BROIL AND BATTLE.

The Chinese Attack Three French Gunboats and Inflict a Loss of Thirty Wounded.

The French Officer in Charge Loses His Life—Gen. Dedisle Telegraphs That He Has Met the Enemy and is Steadily Driving Them Back—Gen. Baker Ordered to Join the Gordon Relief Expedition—The Thorwaldsen Gallery Saved From the Wreck of the Danish Capitol—Crew of the Finchley Saved—Foreign News.

PARIS, October 4.—Le Telegraphe states that it has received information that the government intends shortly to recall Admiral Courbet from China and has, therefore, instructed him to destroy the Chinese fleet in the event of the capture of Kelung failing to cause China to submit to the French demands.

FERRY'S NOTE TO THE ENGLISH EMBASSY.

Ferry, in a note to the British Embassy, explaining the measures adopted by France for the safety of foreigners in China, says that Admiral Courbet was instructed at the beginning that he was not to injure the foreign concessions. The note concludes with assurances of France's solicitude for the interests of English commerce.

THE CHINESE BEING DRIVEN BACK.

Gen. DeLisle sends a dispatch stating that hearing that the Chinese troops between Bacle and Langson were moving forward, he took measures necessary to drive them back to their gunboats. A brilliant engagement ensued, four thousaad Chinese troops being pitted against him. Commander Chali of the Massue was killed in the fight. When the dispatch was sent the Chinese were being steadily driven back, and had lost heavily.

AN ENGAGEMENT.

LONDON, October 5.—Advices from Hanoi to-day state that the gunboats Monsqueton, Massue and Hache, while cruising in advance of the party which was reconnoitering in the valley of the Lochnan, was attacked by the Chinese regulars. One French officer was killed and thirty men wounded. Reinforcements have already arrived on the scene of the encounter and others, under the command of Gen. Negrier, have left Hanoi.

A TIOT AT HONG KONG.

HONG KONG, October 4.—A serious riot among coolies occurred here yesterday. Some boatmen refused to convey the cargo to the French ships and a general strike followed, resulting in disorder. The populace maltreated the police, who endeavored to preserve order. The military finally quieted the disturbance. Several natives were killed and a number wounded. The excitement has now subsided.

HALIFAX, October 4.—A sail boat containing John Boyd, Donald Morrison, John Gillis and Jonathan Gillis of Baddack capsized during a squall near Boulard last evening. Boyd and the two Gillises were drowned.

THE CREW OF THE FINCHLEY.

The officers and crew of the steamer Finchley, which sank off Isaac's Harbor, Monday, has arrived here. They state they were proceeding to Sydney for coal, and the fog was so thick they kept continually sounding. Monday morning at 8 o'clock they grounded on Pollock's Rocks. The steamer came off shortly after, leaking, and they decided to make for Halifax. A short time after she struck on the middle ledge of the southeast breaker, off the county harbor, and sank almost immediately. The captain and crew took to the boats. Captain Steward and the third engineer did not save a stitch of their clothing, but the others managed to procure most of their property. The vessel now lies in the same position, with the tops of her masts out of water. Captain Garson remain sat the wreck.

GOULD CABLES BROKEN.

Both the Gould cables between Europe and America are broken.

Although some of them are inclined to oppose the proposition, as, if it is carried out, it would have a tendency to interfere with the facilities which now exist for dealing between different markets, and would enable a large corporation to use the information which it might obtain for private benefit, it is generally believed that, in spite of these arguments against the plan, it will have a large support on the ground that it will give greater stability to American securities.

HOLDERS OF AMERICAN SECURITIES.

The membership of the proposed association for the protection of holders of American railway securities will not be limited to members of the Stock Exchange, but bankers and merchants will be invited to join. Expectation is that one or two private banks will, without difficulty, be induced to join and support the movement with their names and money. A hundred members of the Exchange attended the meeting yesterday.

GARMOYLE-FORTESQUE.

DETROIT, October 4.—A report is published here that the Garmoyle-Fortesque case has finally been settled. Miss Fortesque receives $125,000 and surrenders letters in her possession, including those of Lord Cairns. Lord Garmoyle refused to submit to cross-examination by Counselor Russell.

A boat race between the members of the crew of the United States frigate Lancaster and Southhampton Coal Porters' Club took place at Southhampton to-day. The Americans led for some time, but the Coal Porters gradually overhauled and passed them, after which they drew right away and won by nearly half a mile. The race was exciting, and was witnessed by an immense assemblage from the ships and housetops.

F.," which some of the local boot-blacks recognized as belonging to a Jacksonville boy.

Latest Developments in the Local Contests.

Dr. McLean Denies all Bribery Charges and Will Submit a Conciliatory Proposition—J. G. McGinniss Nominated for Senator—Political Notes.

Dr. J. H. McLean is still undetermined whether or not he will accept the alleged nomination tendered him on Thursday night and make the race. He was again unaccessible to-day, but from Mr. Fisher, his friend and counselor, something was learned as to his intentions. "The doctor," said Mr. Fisher, "has been on 'Change to-day, seeing his Republican friends, and learning their views. He does not intend to act hastily in this matter, but you can say that by next Tuesday he will be prepared to submit to the Republicans of the district a proposition which, I am certain, will serve to reconcile all factions and stifle all complaint."

"Will it be in the nature of a compromise or of arbitration?"

"I am not at liberty just now to say what will be its form, but I can say that it will be such a proffer as will effectually silence all those factionists who are now talking so loudly against him, whether it be accepted or not. I can say, further, that the stories about his spending such large sums of money are false."

Inquiry in other directions discovered that McLean has been contemplating making a propositiou that the claims of himself and Brown be submitted to a primary election, the polls to be kept open for two days. It is said, however, that he has about concluded not to do this and that it is not improbable that on Tuesday he will announce his withdrawal from the race. Bets are five to one that he will not.

The movement for an independent candidate took form this morning in the circulation of a call upon Judge Lindley to become an independent candidate.

THE SENATORIAL CONVENTIONS.

The official call of the Republican Central Committee provided for conventions to meet at Concordia Hall, at No. 1022 South Fourth street, and at Stolle's Hall, at 10 o'clock this morning, to nominate Senatorial candidates in the Twenty-ninth, Thirty-first and Thirty-third Senatorial Districts, respectively. The action of the City Convention subsequent to the call, however, gave the Thirty-first District nomination to the Greenbackers, hence but two nominations remained to be made by the Republicans.

The Twenty-ninth District Convention met at 10 o'clock, at Concordia Turner Hall, all the delegates being present. Theodore Horman was made temporary chairman and Killian Frank, secretary. Committees on Permanent Organization and Credentials were appointed, and reported after a brief consultation. Under the permanent organization, John Krauss took the chair and Mr. Frank continued as secretary. Nominations being in order, Leo Rassieur presented the name of Maj. James C. McGinnis, and that gentleman was nominated by acclamation, after ex-Senator Manistre had made a lengthy speech. The nominee was brought before the convention and made a speech of thanks.

The convention of the Thirty-third District was to have been held at 10 o'clock this morning at Stolle's Hall, but a POST-DISPATCH reporter was the only man who responded to the call on time. The barkeeper who has charge of the hall answered somewhat impatiently when questioned about the convention. "You fellows," said he, "don't seem to know what you want. Yesterday morning a couple of men came in and asked if the Republican convention was to be held here. I told them I didn't know. They said they heard it was, and after waiting a while they went away and never came back. Soon afterward three others came in and talked the same way, and they went away too. They kept coming by ones and twos all day and until eight o'clock last night, but there were never enough of them to get up a meeting. We tired of the whole business."

Just as he finished, Dick Mollencott, the Twentieth Ward delegate, arrived, and he and the reporter hunted up Central Committeeman Koring, whom they found in his saloon on Cass avenue. He was amazed to hear there was to be a convention, but, on consulting the call, he admitted that he had overlooked the matter. It was then agreed that, since everybody else seemed to have forgotten the convention, it would be best for Mr. Koring to fix upon some day next week for the gathering and to notify all the delegates by mail. Neither Mr. Mallencott nor Mr. Koring had heard of any candidate for the honor of running against Senator Phelan, and a committee will doubtless be appointed to hunt for one.

MR. BROWN TO MR. HAYS.

Mr. Brown, the late candidate for Congress in the Ninth District, has furnished to Mr. Sam Hays the following answer to Hays' request that the story of the $5,000 proposition be left to a committee of three citizens:

"ST. LOUIS, October 4, 1884.

"MR. SAMUEL HAYS—Yours of the 3d inst. is before me. I deny that any action of mine, extraordinary or otherwise, has provoked a public scandal to your injury. There is no man in this community who would less willingly or knowingly wrong any one than myself. As you are well aware, the true and correct account of the matter in question has never been published, simply because my lips have been sealed by a promise to you not to let your name be known. I suggest, therefore, that the matter be published, or if you prefer all details can be referred to the following named gentlemen: Messrs. John W. Noble, James L. Huse, and Jerome Hill. I have had no conversation on the subject with the gentlemen named. Yours, etc.,

"ROBERT S. BROWN."

LEGISLATIVE NOMINATIONS.

The Republican Convention of the Second Legislative District met at Turner Hall this afternooon at 2 o'clock. Chris Schawacker was chosen chairman and Chris Schweickhardt secretary. The convention nominated Capt. R. E. M. Bain and Chas. Schweickhardt, leaving two vacancies to be filled by the Greenback Central Committee.

THE FUSIONISTS IN COUNCIL.

The Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee met in called session at the Lindell Hotel this morning, for the purpose of boiling down the electoral tickets—Republican and Greenback—so as to make one ticket consisting of half of each kind. Fourteen of the seventeen members were present, and H. Martin Williams was there to tell them that Ford will be elected by from 5,000 to 15,000, and eight or ten Greenbackers will be sent to Congress. Two hours were spent in deliberation as to what electors to strike off and what electors to retain, and then a recess was taken till two o'clock this afternoon. It transpired that J. C. Thompson, thenominee for State Treasurer, who for a few days was disposed to lift himself off the ticket, had consented to remain, and will make the race.

The committee re-assembled at two o'clock, but at three little, if any, progress had been made.

A LOVELY SERIES OF NOMINATIONS.

The Democrats made their nominations last night in the four legislative districts, without any riot.

In the First District the meeting was held at Union Park Hall, with A. N. DeMenil in the chair. Without any formality J. W. Stith, Chas. Rausch and George W. Hall were placed in nomination for the three places to be filled, and there being no other suggestions, all three were declared the choice of the party. A motion to give the delegation an anti-Prohibition instruction was promptly tabled.

The Second District convention met at Central Hall, Joseph N. Judge chairman and Ed Butler's son James acting as secretary. The gentlemen placed before the meeting were the following: Matthew Ryan, Vernon W. Knapp, Capt. J. W. Brown, Henry W. Bond, Wm. Smallwood, Joseph N. Judge and Andy Carroll. A ballot was taken and Matt Ryan, Joseph N. Judge, H. W. Bond and Capt. J. W. Brown were nominated.

The Third District met at Uhrig's Cave, and, choosing E. B. Cronin for president and Chas. C. Clark for secretary, lost no time in taking a ballot on Wm. P. Bentley, Geo. Castleman, Robert W. Goode, Frank B. Curtis and James M Loring. Curtis, Loring and Castleman were elected, and instructed to vote for Vest for United States Senator.

Harry G. Keevil presided over the Fourth District convention temporarily, and Thos. B. Hennessy permanently. The names presented by the various wards were: John E. Haggerty, John F. Walton, Thos. Wand, Richard Wray, James Carroll, Vincent J. Gallager. The four gentlemen nominated were: James Carrol, Richard Wray, Thos. Wand and John F. Walton.

The Democratic Vanguards of the Third Ward, the oldest political campaign club, met to-night at Gus Gorden's to elect military officers and consider the advisability of going to Alton in a body next week to attend the Harrison Jubilee. The Guards numbered sixty and are growing rapidly.

POLITICAL NOTES.

In order that the Republicans of the Eighth District may not be led into error, Geo. W. Bailey announces that he will under no circumstances accept the nomination that Henry Pins threw away.

Andy F. Brown is out in a card in which he declares that, though still on the track in the Eighth District, he will willingly swap his distinction for John Grogan's obscurity, if Mr. Grogan will consent to run.

A Democratic mass meeting will be held to-night at the corner of Broadway and Cherokee streets.

The Cleveland and Hendricks Club of the Twenty-fourth Ward, 250 strong, will turn out to-night for a parade. Instead of torches the members will carry small brooms and the officers full-sized brooms.

Several Democratic clubs are negotiating with Capt. Henry Leyhe for the use of his steamer Spread Eagle to carry them to Alton on the night of October 10 to attend the Carter Harrison meeting on that night.

Mr. Frank J. Bowman is circulating a petition requestin Judge E. P. Lindley to become a candidate for Congress in the Ninth District against John M Glover.

The convention of the Thirty-first Senatorial District has been postponed to Wednesday night at 7 o'clock, when it will meet at 1022 South Broadway.

MORE TALK.

Blaine Makes a Speech in the Democratic Town of Newark.

NEWARK, OHIO, October 4.—Mr. Blaine and party left Columbus by a special train on the Baltimore and Ohio road at 9:30 this morning. At Columbus ex-Governor Foster and Mr. Hanna, of the State Committee, left the party and Mr. Charles Moore of Columbus and Hon. Stuart L. Woodford of New York joined it. The people in the depot cheered as the train moved out and Mr. Blaine bowed his acknowledgement from the rear platform. The first stop was at Newark, where there there was a large crowd, composed mostly of workingmen.

THE SPEECH AT NEWARK.

Mr. Blaine was loudly cheered at the Depot, but Newark is a Democratic town, and the demonstrations along the streets as he was driven to the Court House were tamer than at any place yet. Four or five boys, from 8 to 12 years of age, ran along beside the carriages of the party and shouted: "Hurrah for Cleveland!" In front of the Court House several thousand people were assembled. Col. Chas. H. Kibbler introduced the distinguished guest as Jas. G. Blaine, late of Maine, but now of the United States of America." This introduction elicited several rounds of applause. Mr. Blaine said: "While I accept your kindly compliments to myself and am grateful for it, I desire to say that the mere personality of a candidate for the Presidency is of small account, but what he stands for may be of very great account, either in the way of good or evil. ["That's it," and cheers.] The question before the people of the United States is whether they wish to overthrow the financial and industrial policy that has been established by the Republican party ["No, no,"]and for myself I am only of importance because I represent those who answer as you do, No, no. [Cheers.] I stand in the midst of a rich community, one that I am familiar with one, that I have known from my earliest childhood. I know your great growth in wealth; I know your great progress in every moral and material interest, and I call you to witness, every candid man in this assemblage, whether he be Republican or Democrat, and perhaps some Democrats do me the honor to listen—['Yes, yes!']—I call every one to witness that your progress in the last twenty years has been during the existence and enforcement of the industrial and financial system of the Republican party, in which a protective tariff and a sound currency are the great and leading features, I call you all to witness that your progress has been greater, double over, than your progress in sixty preceding years. ["Hear, hear" and great cheering]. Your vote will decide the contest on the 14th of October. This current month you meet your duty. I have confidence that you will discharge it like men." [Renewed cheering].

GIRL GARROTTERS.

A Frightful Story of Depravity from the Slums of Chicago.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, October 4.—A terrible story of youthful depravity was unfolded to-day by the arrest of five little girls for larceny. Maggie Doyle, aged 15; Theresa Garrig, 14; Kate Hammodd, 15; Mollie Sairnsky, 16, and Kate Novock, 14, were arrested on the complaint of Sam Yuen Sing, the keeper of a Chinese laundry at No. 151 North Clark street. The girls live with their parents, and pretended each day, as they left home, they were going out to work in different establishments. They are poorly dressed and show a profligacy which is seldom seen in children. The girls had organized into a regular band, known as the "Chosen Five," for pillaging the Chinese laundries. Maggie Doyle was elected Captain, and planned all the work. Three weeks ago the police arrested the girls, and they were fined $100 each, but their fines were suspended on condition of good behavior. This had no effect on them, and they procured chloroform and visited a number of laundries, three of them going into the back rooms with the employes, while the others chloroformed and robbed the proprietors. They secured $10 50 from Sam Yuen Sing in this way. In court one of the girls admitted they had been visiting Chinamen, and that a doctor named Reynolds, with whom they had been intimate, gave them chloroform. A number of Chinamen have been arrested, and about twenty-five more are said to be implicated. The girls were sent to the Bridewell in default of $100 fine. Reynolds is looked upon as a reputable physician in the neighborhood where he practices. The girls told stories against one another in girl fashion, and their narratives showed a fearful depravity.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

R. A. Standish Dead—New Corporations—The Methodist Conference.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., October 4.—The following corporations filed articles to-day: The Kansas City Rapid Transit Delivery Company; capital, $6,400; and the Bates County Loan and Land Company, of Butler; capital, $20,000. R. A. Standish, clerk of the Cole County Court, died last night at midnight, after an illness of three months, of consumption. Mr. Standish was a young gentleman of great popularity and excellent business capacity. He was a nephew of Gen. Monroe M. Parsons, who was killed in Mexico shortly after the close of the late war, and a grandson of Gen. G. A. Parsons, who died in this city nearly three years ago. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from his mother's residence.

Governor Crittenden has just appointed T. M. Winston, jr., county clerk of this county, vice Richard A. Standish, deceased. The appointment is a good one. Mr. Winston has been a deputy in the office for many years.

Hon. D. P. Stratton of Nevada is in the city on legal business. He reports the Democracy of Vernon as solid for the whole ticket. Ford's candicacy creates no enthusiasm in the Southwest.

The Methodist Conference will continue in session until Monday evening at least.

A Dishonest Official.

NEWARK, N. J., October 4.—J. B. Ward, an accountant employed by the city to examine into the various departments, has reported that during the years ending 1876, City Treasurer John W. Stout, who died a fortnight ago, habitually loaned the city money to contractors and others without due warrants of the law. The accountant says he is unable at present to state what loss the city suffered, as the books were not well kept, but he puts down $70,000 as not being accounted for, but no present deficiency exists. The investigation is still progressing. The developments show carelessness and probably fraud on the part of Stout, but does not effect the present condition of the city finances.

Accidental Shooting.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., October 4.—A fearful tragedy occurred in the northwest part of the city limits at 11 o'clock to-day. A party of boys went out camping, when one, George Turner, 16 years of age, either by accident or design, discharged a musket into a crowd of his companions, riddling one, Ernest Gibson, 10 years of age, with buck shot, killing him instantly, and wounding another, Jamie Livingston, in the bowels, probably fatally. Turner, after the deed, ran, but was caught by Sheriff Black and lodged in jail. Great excitement prevails.

Going Out of Business.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Oct. 4.—The News says: "The Citizens' National Bank will go into voluntary liquidation and close up its business by reason of the expiration of its charter. The bank has been successfully managed, never passing a dividend, and its stock has never been on the market. Capital, $300,000.

THE CHICAGO POLICE.

Dr. Lutz Tells of the Improvements He Saw in the Garden City.

Dr. Lutz, Vice-President of the Board of Police Commissioners, returned this morning from Chicago, where he spent several days inspecting the Police Department. "We are far ahead of Chicago in Police Department," said Dr. Lutz, as he stepped off a train this morning. "The men and the system we have is far ahead of Chicago. I saw many of the men there with a week's growth of beard on their faces. Many of the stations look like abandoned railway stations. The pools of spit on the floor suggest the proper place for cuspidores—articles of furniture unknown to the furniture of the police stations."

"Are there any improvements on the St. Louis force?"

"Yes, there is one that I propose to introduce if possible. It is the relay plan. All the stations in Chicago are furnished with beds where a certain number of single men are assigned to sleep. The day force is there during the night and the night force during the day. In this way there is always a reserve force on hand that can be called out in times of riot or extensive trouble. This, I think, is a very good plan, and as it involves a very slight expenditure, I propose to introduce such a resolution in the Board. There is plenty of room in the second stories of the Station Houses. The only furniture necessary is a hospital bed and a closet in which to hang their clothes, as the firemen do.

"Do they posses any other advantages."

"Yes, one very great advantage. They have no Police Board. The department which comprises about 600 men, is under the Mayor, who gives almost entire control into the hands of the Chief. This is a great advantage, in my opinion. One man then knows what is to be done in department affairs. I decidedly favor this arrangement, but notwithstanding this we have a much better police department than Chicago."

FOR STOPPING A PAY CAR.

A County Justice is in Contempt of the United States.

Solon Humphrey and Thomas E. Tutt, receivers of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, made application this morning to the United States Circuit Court for the arrests of Hustin Lowe, F. M. Reager, John Gagan and J. M. Shutz, citizens of Gentry County, Mo., for contempt in causing the arrest of J. B. Shephard, paymaster for the receivers, while in the discharge of his duties in paying the employes at McFall, Missouri, on the 1st instant. On the 3d of September, Lowe, a deputy constable, served a garnishee summons upon Shephard requiring the receiver to appear before Reager and answer as to whether or not they were indebted to one Milles. Shephard paid no attention to the garnishee proceedings, and on his next trip over the road while his car was stopped at McFall paying off the men, Lowe, the constable, accompanied by Gagan, the plaintiff and Shultz, his attorney, appeared in the car and arrested Shephard, and threatened to imprison him until he paid the amount specified in the garnishee summons. Shephard, in order to keep himself out of jail, paid the money and went on his way rejoicing. The four parties above named will doubtless be arrested and afforded an opportunity to explain to the United States Court.

RECEIVED INTO THE FOLD.

Rev. Dr. J. H. Foy Admitted Into the Episcopal Church.

It is now over three months since Dr. J. H. Foy, formerly pastor of Central Christian Church, applied for admission to the Episcopal Church. The matter was at once referred by Bishop Robertson to the Standing Committee of the diocese, composed of Rev. Montgomery Schuyler, president; Rev. F. B. Scheetz of Kirkwood, Rev. Dr. Fulton, Mr. Charles Hoffman, Capt. Silas Bent and Prof. Patton. Owing to the absence of the president in Europe the committee has held no meeting during the summer to consider the application. Dr. Schuyler having arrived home this week the committee, with the exception of Dr. Fulton, met yesterday afternoon at Christ Church, and Dr. Foy's candidacy being brought up for consideration, his request for admission was unanimously granted. All the conditions of the candidature having now been met, nothing remains between Dr. Foy and ordination but several months' more study of the canons and church dicipline.

City Hall Notes.

Collector Hudson to-day paid over to the City Treasurer $35,097 46 on account of taxes and licenses.

Of the above number 72 were males. 57 married and 9 colored; the total under 5 years of age was 57. The nativity of the deceased was as follows: St. Louis, 63; United States, 31; England, 3; Ireland, 14; Germany, 19; all other countries, 8. Shawley, 14 years; Thomas Hanlon, 15 years; Orson Connell, 15 years; John Fruin, 13 years; John Mallon 13 years; Fred Rost, 13 years and an incorrigible law-breaker. The Mayor ordered the release of three orphans, committed to the House of Refuge on the 8th ult.: Mary Lee, Minnie Lee and Eddie Green, aged 12, 8 and 6 years, respectively, and furnished them with free transportation to Beaver, Phelps County, Mo., where their grandfather lives and to whose care they will be committed.

Judge Wylie in Town.

Judge Andrew Wylie, of the United States Superior Court of the District of Columbia, arrived in the city last night, and was to-day at the Court House, in company with John G. Priest, attending to some business of a private character. Judge Wylie is a figure of especial interest because of the fact that it was he who tried the Star Route cases. He is a gentleman of fifty-five or sixty years, of very plain dress, white hair, white, bushy eyebrows, and smooth, intellectual face. He is making scores of friends. He leaves to-night for Chicago.

The Bridal Bulletin.

The following marriage licenses were issued today: Giovanni Coloqua, East St. Louis, to Theresa Palaoro, East St. Louis; Henry Schwarze, 1452 Sullivan avenue, to Charlotte Klute, 1452 Sullivan avenue; Pinckney Simmons, Laclede avenue, to Celeste Williams, Laclede avenue; Julius Borgelt, 2843 Benton street, to Mary Mosimane, Highland, Illinois; John Galliker, 1414 South Seventh street, to Mrs Frida Huber, 1414 South Seventh street.

Objecting to Jamison's Report.

Mr. W. H. Bliss, as attorney for Miss Lulu Rippey, the sole heir of the late George W. Rippey, filed exceptions in the Probate Court this morning to the final report of Wm. C. Jamison, executor of the estate. The main ground of objection to the settlement is an allowance of $854 which Jamison claims to be due him as commissions on various sums turned over to the heirs and creditors since 1874.

A Sale Suddenly Stopped.

Col. John G. Priest was engaged as a special commissioner in conducting the sale on the Court House steps this noon of a large amount of property in North St. Louis, on which a mortgage of thirty years' standing had been foreclosed, when the proceedings were terminated suddenly by the arrival of a telegram from New York directing the sale to be stopped.

A Peculiar Case.

A buggy belonging to Dr. D. A. Benkendorf, 1510 Gratiot street, was taken from Sixth and Olive streets a few days ago. To-day the rig was returned by a lady who said she had taken it by mistake and that her own buggy was stolen at the time. She has not reported her name or loss at police headquarters and at present the case presents some peculiar features.

A Check, but no Money.

Warrants were applied for to-day against A. B. Metcalf, treasurer of the American Sign Company. The complainant, a painter named Reagan, stated that he had been given a check on the Merchants' Bank for $7, and on presenting the paper yesterday was told that the bank had no account with the firm.

Deaths From Alcoholism.

Post-mortem examinations on the bodies of John Casey and Timothy McCarthy to-day developed the fact that death had resulted from alcoholism. McCarthy was found dead in bed at 2700 Market street. Casey's dead body was found in his room at Sixth and Biddle streets.

Letters Revoked.

The letters of Wm. C. Jamison as executor of the estate of Adele Tholozan were revoked in the Probate Court this morning.

Passing Counterfeit Money.

John Gillum, the negro charged with passing a counterfeit $5 bill, and a hearing this afternoon before Commissioner Cullen in the Marshal's office at the Custom House. He will probably be bound over.

By One Majority.

From the Detroit Free Press.

We were about three miles from Natchez when we heard a great shouting and wailing in a negro cabin by the roadside, and it was decided to dismount and go in. It was a tumble-down structure with but one single room, and into this were crowded sixteen or eighteen colored people, mostly of female sex. On a heap of straw on the clay floor was a sick woman. She was rolling her eyes and writhing as if suffering great pain. When asked what ailed her an old white-headed negro, who was called "Doctor" by the others, replied:

"Dat's jist what we doan' agree on. Some says it's de bilyus colic, an' some says it's de gallopin' consumpshum."

"Why, man, something ought to be done for her right away."

"'Zactly sah—'zactly, an' Ize de doctah dot would like to take right hold of de case."

"But why don't you?"

"Kaze Ize boxed up, sah, I nebber gin de same medicine fur gallopin' consumpshum dat I do fur bilyus colic, an' until we kin decide on de ailement I doan' dare go ahead."

We were on our horses and ready to move off when the old man came out with a happier look on his face and said;

"Gem'len, we has sorter took a vote on it, an' we has declar'd it rheumatism by one majority. Ize gwine right at it to heat de bricks an' gin her an all-night sweat."

Mutality.

From the Lowel Citizen.

"Ferdinand, my love, why do you sit so far from me this evening?" she anxiously inquired.

He was silent and remained sitting at the opposite end of the sofa.

Again she spoke. Again he was silent, hesitated, and finally murmured:

"Isabella, my dear, I blush to tell it, but I have been eating onions to-day."

"You darling," exclaimed the lovely girl, with a look of glad surprise illuminating her face as she sprang close to his side, "so have I!"

It is estimated that the importations of flour and wheat combined with the farmers' deliveries of native wheat during the past week have exceeded the weekly consumption by a quantity equal to 2,093,750 bushels, and consequently the visible supply in the United Kingdom has increased that much.——Stocks of lard at the five principal Continental ports on October 1 were: Hamburg, 9,000 tcs; Bremen, 2,500; Stettin, 1,000; Antwerp, 6,000; Havre, 4,000; total, 22,500 tcs, against 26,000 on September 1, 1884, and 36,000 October 1, 1883.——The Chicago bucket shops have not given up the fight for quotations. On Thursday, at the instance of the Public Grain and Stock Exchange, the president and directors of the Board of Trade were cited to appear in court and show cause why they should not be attached for contempt of court in interfering with the administration of justice by cutting off the Board of Trade quotations from J. R. Hume and others.——The value of No. 2 red winter wheat on October 1 was 81 in St. Louis, 90¼ in New York and 97¼ per bushel in Liverpool, with ocean freights 4¼d. On September 1 it was 81⅜ in St. Louis, 92¼ in New York and $1 00¾ in Liverpool, with ocean freights 2¾d.——The stocks of wheat in this market is 22,430 bu smaller to-day than last Saturday, while the amount of No. 2 red on hand is 30,900 bu larger; withdrawals from elevators for past week were 101,823 bu for city milling and 214,834 bu for rail shipment. The stock of corn increased 63,560 bu, No. 2 mixed increasing 68,437 bu; week's withdrawals were 28,016 bu to city, 18,445 bu to railroads and 2,077 bu to river. Stock of oats is 51,453 bu larger than last Saturday, No. 2 increasing 41,340 bu; withdrawals for week were 23,513 bu to city, 9,393 bu to railroads and 46,094 bu to river.——The next visible supply of wheat should show 2,000,000 bu increase, so C. A. King & Co. of Toledo wire Al Fath.——Receipts of wheat in Kansas City were 200 cars, but of corn only 30 cars.——Indiana farmers are said to be selling freely again.——A change to colder weather is expected. In St. Paul the temperature has fallen 17 degrees, in the West and Northwest it is cold. A flock of wild geese were seen flying south, and an old darkey told Will Kennett last night: "Boss, dars a cold moon, I'se a tellin' yer."——Speaking of corn, Phil Shirmer remarked; "The estimate of consumption of the corn crop of 1831 was 150,000,000 bus. for human food, 167,000,000 bus for exports and spirits, 520,000,000 bus. for animal feeding and 780,000,000 bus. for fattening hogs and cattle, or a total of 1,617,000,000 bus. This is about 4,500,000 bus. a day the year round, but winter consumption certainly is nearly, if not quite double that of summer months. 'Tis therefore difficult to approximate the saving to the crops by the late rains and present warm weather in the splendid pasturage we now have. It really is a second corn crop, whose effects will be felt later on, as it's an addition probably of three to five hundred million bushels to the crop indirectly, and since the last estimate of the Agricultural Bureau."——The local crowd generally look for lower prices next week, though at any good decline there would probably be free buyers.——There was some right lively trading in corn to-day, especially in the year option. Moses Fraley bought heavily, taking one lot of 250,000 bushels from Dave Francis alone.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION. CLOSING 1 P. M.

Wheat continues to move downward in value, though retaining the same unsettled tone and prices ranging around in a small circle most of the time. Cable advices were fairly encouraging, the public Liverpool reporting the market firm and demand good, with spot a shade higher, and private cables were said to be improving. But while this tended to prevent any serious break in the markets on this side, the feeling was bearish. Larger receipts were expected next week, and as stocks are accumulating heavily, the speculative idea is to sell. There is such a lack of demand just now that the market feels no support under it. About the only buyers are shorts, and sellers take advantage of every weak spot to still further depress values. Nearing the close the market declined steadily, as all outside advices became worse and worse, and finally closed ⅝@¾c below yesterday's close. October sold at 80⅛@80⅝ on first call to 80⅛, and at the close was not salable at over 80. November opened at 82⅜ and improved to 82½@82⅝, but declined to 82¼, subsequently fluctuating between 82¼ and 82⅜ until after the noon call, then declining to and closing at 81¾. December opened at 84⅛ and advanced to 84¾, but subsequently sagged down until at close it was off to 83⅞. Year brought 80⅜@80⅛ on first call and at close was worth 80. May sold at 94⅜ to 93⅜ and at close 93¾ was asked. In cash grades there was a large decline. No. 2 red ¾@1c, No. 3 red 2@2½c and No. 4, 2@2½c lower. At these reduced rates there was only a moderate demand, the inquiry running light from all classes of buyers. No; 2 red 80¼ regular, 80⅛@¼ E. side; No. 3 red 72¼@71½ this and 72¾@72 E. side; No. 4 64¼@64 this and 66@65¼ E. side; rejected 55 bid for St. L., 56 for E., 56½ for V. and U.; No; 2 Mediterranean 79½ bid for Do.; No 3 do 73 regular, 74 bid for Valley.

Corn was up again this morning, partly ownig to continued warm weather and light receipts, but chiefly because of Chicago. In that market there was a perfect bring, though the chief advance was in Novemver which sold at 53@54c. The longs are said to have sold out 2,000,000 October, and taken in a line of November and year which may account for the sharp advance. The home market advanced stiffly under a free demand until 2½ higher for the near months and ¾@1c higher for options beyond November. But the advance did not hold, expectations of a change to cooler weather bringing sellers out so that prices broke rapidly. The close was weak with November ¾c higher and the more deferred options ⅛c above yesterday's close. Octyber sold on noon call at 52½. November opened at 42, advanced to 43⅞, and later went off to and closed at 42⅜. Year opened at 37½, sold at 37⅜, then advanced to 38¼ only to break away later to 37⅜@37½, finally closing at 37½ bid. January sold at 35⅜ up to 36 and off to 35½. May opened and at 37¼, selling in the interim as high as 28⅜. Cash was slow. No. 2 mixed sold ½c higher, but was only salable to a speculative buyer, and rejected declined was weak. No. 2 mixed 52 regular, 52½ bid for E. side; No. 2 white mixed 56 in St. L., 53 bid for E side; rejected do 50 bid for U, 53 for St. L.; rejected 49 to 48½ in St. L. and E. side; no-grade ——.

Oats advanced and were strong, the demand far exceeding the offers to sell. October sold at 26¼, November at 26¾, December at 27⅜, year at 26⅜ to 26½ and May at 30 to 30⅛, the strong and higher corn market strengthening prices; but at close the top prices were not obtainable. The cash market was better in price and firm, but quiet. No. 2 sold to speculators at 26¼@26 for regular, and rejected on order account at 24 in St. L., C. and E. side; bids of 27½ for No. 2 white E. side and 21 for no-grade in St. L.

Rye dull and nominal; No. 2 was offered at 52, but there was no bid for it.

Barley very dull, as it usually is on Saturday, but quotably unchanged. Quotations are: Rejected 40; No. 3 to prime 45@50; choice 65@70; fancy 75@77½.

Flour—There was no particular change in this market to-day. Trade was quiet under a light demand from local buyers, the feeling was steady and prices well sustained at the following: We quote: Fine, superfine and x nominal at $2@2 25; xx $2 20@2 35; xxx $2 45@2 55 family $2 70@2 80; choice $3 25@3 35; fancy $3 75@3 85; extra do $3 90@4 15; patent $4 50@4 90. These prices are for lots on arrival at depot and levee; favorite brands 15 to 25c more and order lots higher.

Cornmeal—Unchanged at $2 60@2 65 on orders; pearl meal and grits at $3 50@3 75.

Rye Flour—Unchanged at $3 40@3 60.

Millfeed very dull, weak and low. Sacked bran 56 this side, 58 at country point and 60 f.o.b. this side; bulk 48 at country point.

Hay was steady, and for good grades the demand was very fair, but low qualities were hard to sell. Owing to the recent wet and warm weather, a large part of the receipts are now coming in out of condition. Quotations are: Prairie $9@10 for prime to choice; mixed $9@12 for low to choice; timothy $12 50@13 for prime; $14@15 for choice to fancy.

Provisions—Business was much better and the market was steady. The improved demand was mainly for bacon, which was traded in right freely. Mess pork sold steadily and lightly at $16 50 for old. Prime steam lard was salable at 7¼. Some wagon lots of coarse dry salt longs sold at 9.30 and c'ribs at 7.60, and boxed longs at 9.35@9½, c'ribs at 9⅞ and shorts at 10; on cash orders loose shoulders were held at 6⅛, longs at 9.65, c'ribs at 9.85 and shorts at 10.05. Packed bacon shoulders sold at 7⅛; longs at 10½@10⅝, c'ribs at 10⅝ and shorts at 11.10@11⅛. Hams 12½@15 for large to fancy medium averages. Breakfast bacon 12½@13½. Beef—Family $10 @12 ⅌ brl, according to brand: on orders higher, $6@7 ⅌ ½ brl; dried 13@14, selected 16; smoked tongues $5 50@6 ⅌ dozen. Salt—Domestic $1@1 10 per brl as in size of lot; ground alum $1 10 ⅌ sack—small way higher.

Highwines—Steady at $1 12. Sales to-day 157 brls. Cincinnati firm at $1 11; Peoria firm on basis for finished goods at $1 11.

Lead was dull and the market was weak besides. There was not much of a demand, it coming from city corroders alone, and some holders were pressing the sale of their stock. It was understood that bids of $3 55 were invited for refined. Sales were made, delivered, of 1 car hard at $3 55 and 2 cars refined at $3 60.

Grass Seeds—Fair demand for timothy, clover and red top at steady prices; other seed nominal at 25@40c, and the first-named are quoted at $1 25@1 30 for timothy, $4 25@4 50 for clover, and 30@37½ for red top. Sales: 7 sacks timothy and red top mixed at $1; 42 sacks timothy at $1 22½.

Flaxseed—Steady; pure test salable at $1 29@1 30.

CATTLE—The market was only nominal to-day. The lack of supply and the very few buyers of any class in attendance preventing anything like activity. Speculative buyers were looking around, but regular local operators and Eastern shippers exhibited little disposition to trade, and sales were scattering and made at long intervals. Fresh arrivals were small, the greater part of the supply consisting of common stuff left over from the day previous, and these were not up to the requirements of any class of buyers. Speaking of the week's trade, Scaling & Tamblyn, in their circular, say: "The cattle trade has been slow and generally unsatisfactory, and the bulk of sales show a decline since last quotations of about 25 cents per hundred. The heavy run of range cattle from the territories still continues and the market has been given no opportunity to recover. If the supply of cattle could be more evenly distributed through the year, it would be better for buyers and sellers and give a more even market. The cattle are wanted and can be disposed of at fair prices, but it is against the interest of shippers to send too many at once." The closing prices to-day were as follows:

HOGS—Business quiet, but the market generally steady and current prices well sustained. Offerings small and soon disposed of to shippers and speculative buyers at firm yesterday's rates, advices from other markets being satisfactory, and the demand fully equal to the supply.

SHEEP—Sterling and characterized by a firmer feeling, due to the good Eastern demand.

TWELVE PAGES

SATURDAY OCTOBER 4, 1884.

ON the principle of the tattooed men standing by each other Mr. BLAINE ought to come out to St. Louis to give MCLEAN's campaign a lift.

THE slaughter of citizens by the police continues with unabated energy. Last night, for the second time in the week, a policeman undertook to murder a citizen for the crime of trying to avoid arrest.

Do we hear talk of inducing the good Dr. MCLEAN to get off the track? We shall expect this when we hear of the ostrich disgorging the keg of nails on which it has lunched, or of a shark voluntarily letting go of a seaman's leg.

IT is rather hard to make out the political situation from a perusal of the morning papers. According to the Republican all the Blaine meetings are dismal failures, and according to the Globe-Democrat nobody goes to the Democratic meetings.

IN playing his cards at the Turner Hall Convention Mr. BROWN found himself in the position of that member of the Thompson Street Poker Club who attempted to rake in the pot on four aces, but yielded to a gentleman who held two nines and a razor.

MR. CAMPBELL's statement that at the Congressional Convention delegates were offered at $10 apiece does gross injustice to the statesmanship of the Ninth District. A most searching inquiry fails to reveal a single well-authenticated instance of a statesman who went at less than par.

WE are sorry to learn from the Courrier des Etats Unis that the newspapers of France resent the unfavorable criticisms of the American press on the Chinese expedition. When France learns to accept hostile criticism as easily as we do the French Republic will be more secure than it is now.

THE publisher of an obscene and filthy sheet which disgraced St. Louis has been arrested after a somewhat unnecessary delay. We call attention to the case as one in which the public should interest itself to the extent of seeing that the offender is not allowed to escape through any laxity in the administration of the law.

IN a recent estimate of the expenses of a Congressional campaign in St. Louis the amount of $2,500 was set down as representing the probable cost of the indispensable campaign paper. This was in an estimate made for a green candidate. Old Pills has more accurate information about the cost of a campaign organ.

THE United Kingdom Alliance of Temperance has forwarded from London a resolution congratulating NEAL DOW on the victory for Prohibition at the recent election in Maine. Why did they not congratulate and thank Mr. BLAINE, to whom NEAL DOW himself gives the credit of holding the Maine Republicans up to the Prohibition racket for the last twenty-five years?

BEFORE the ELKINS, DORSEY and KELLOGG crowd obtained control of the Republican party, the New York Sun was very anxious to "turn the rascals out." But when they nominated BLAINE and sent such Republicans as CONKLING and EDMUNDS to the rear, the New York Sun came to the conclusion that the rascals had been turned out. It now considers the Republican party sufficiently purified and worthy to retain power.

AMONG the assets recently offered for sale by the assignee of JAMES D. FISH, the former president of the Marine Bank, were small lots of stock in the Keely Motor Company, in American Antimony, Morning Star, Excelsior Life-Saving Car-Coupling Company, and other "chips and whetstones," some of which brought as much as five cents a pound. Yet with this unusually large assortment of assets Mr. FISH is not reported as having subscribed anything to the Republican campaign fund.

MR. W. H. KENNAN, a Democratic candidate for the Legislature in Audrain, testifies as a classmate of STEVE ELKINS in Missouri University that ELKINS was among the first to help raise a rebel flag in the vicinity of that institution. But if STEVE had fought all through the war in the rebel army, his record since the war would have made him the great Republican leader he is all the same. The man who can make $3,000,000 in less than ten years out of the salary of a Territorial Delegate in Congress, is the beau ideal of Republican loyalty and statesmanship.

IF the Democrats should carry Ohio or come any way near it, there will be a rattling among the dry bones of Cincinnati journalism. The Blaine organ in that city has leased one of its pages to the Republican Independents, who fill it with keen assaults upon his public record. The Cincinnati Enquirer, on the other hand, while it makes a mocking pretense of standing by the Democratic nominees on its editorial page, has given up its first page to the most plausible defenses and laudations of BLAINE and the most virulent attacks upon his opponents that "Gath's" literary bureau and campaign outfit could produce.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

With a change of parties the Ninth District finds itself in exactly the condition of the Fifth District. In the Fifth District fraud and corruption set aside the choice of the Democracy for Congress. The result is that as the Republicans nominated an able, public-spirited and popular candidate the Democrats are generally accepting him as their choice, and the prospect is that in a strong Democratic District a Republican Congressman will be elected.

This should serve as an example to be imitated in St. Louis. Here the honest Republicans have been cheated. Fraud and corruption have succeeded in nominating a candidate whose record reeks with the odor of his past corruptions and whose candidacy is an insult to the city. The Democrats have nominated a public-spirited and patriotic young lawyer, who gives every promise of serving with credit and distinction. If the Republicans of St. Louis are as wise as the Democrats of Kansas City, they will show their wisdom, and rebuke the disgraceful Turner Hall nomination by giving their support to GLOVER.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

The Republicanism of the Ninth District made a bad break of it nominating Old Pills. He corresponds to Dogberry's description of "the most senseless and fit man" more accurately than any one else in the district. As an individual he is grotesque, as a candidate he is corrupt, as a Congressman he is simply idiotic. He does not represent merely the use of money for the purpose of corruption; he represents the corrupt use of money under circumstances which make the situation a roaring farce. It is only reasonable that the decent political sentiment of the district should protest against such a nomination, and it is only reasonable that the Republicans of the district who do not wish to vote for a Democrat should turn instinctively to an Independent nomination and offer their support to any Democrat who would consent to run as an Independent.

Yet this is perhaps the only thing which could make the situation worse. Dr. MCLEAN was nominated only through the culpable negligence and indifference of the stay-at-home voters. If he is allowed to make his campaign on his merits he will be beaten, and he and his venal satellites will learn a lesson they greatly need. Mr. GLOVER will be elected and the district will be represented by an energetic and capable gentleman, who is equally removed from suspicion of political and of personal corruption. Certainly the district can now do no better than to elect Mr. GLOVER. It cannot elect a third candidate under any circumstances. It can, if it unites on Mr. GLOVER, give to corruption a rebuke which may be of value hereafter. But if it endangers Mr. GLOVER's good prospects it can only make it easier for the plutocratic old corruptionist to purchase a seat in that Congress which his presence would disgrace.

OVERWORK.

The breakdown of JOHN MCCULLOUGH at the age of forty-nine will prove a text for ten thousand sermons on the American evil of overwork. The sermons will be not exactly original, but they will undoubtedly be true, logical and convincing; the various congregations will listen, and next day will go to overworking themselves as before.

This is the land of overwork, of premature breakdown, insanity and suicide, but what of it? That is the petty price we pay for the great results we achieve. It reads like a great deal when we read day after day of man after man going down in the struggle. Those who fall are the brightest, the most nervous and energetic and intense, and the loss seems great. But their numbers are, after all, very few, and the loss of the few wholly disappears by comparison with the gain of the millions; and even the lives that are ended too soon are not wasted. Life is measured not by days which succeed each other like waves on the sea, but by achievements. A year of brilliant success is worth more to the man and to his fellow men than an ignoble century. It is better to die young with something done than to live forever doing nothing.

It would of course be better if we could fill our days with effort and prolong our years of life. But each age and social state has its inexorable conditions. In Europe the workers grow old and lives are shortened by two chief causes, want and war. In this land of peace and plenty our victims fall in the warfare of progress, in the battles of the intellect, in the unending campaign we wage against conditions that do not exist in Europe. They who die, die not alone for their country, but for the world, and all humanity which loses something in their death has gained more in their lives.

Rightly looked at, this American overwork is not wholly an evil. It is rather an evidence that we are doing our duty, and, painful as are the oft repeated evidences of its results, it is better that it should be so than that Americans should abate one jot of that fiery energy which in a generation has carried the weak Republic to the first place among the nations of the world.

IF the friends of CLEVELAND should carry Ohio on the 14th it will be a most remarkable victory, and the moral effect will be strong and enduring. All that organization, dash, brilliancy, partisan zeal and desperation, magnetism and money can do, will be done for the other side. GOULD and HUNTINGTON and the other magnates of the money power who are playing for such immense stakes, one of the least of which is 100,000,000 acres of forfeitable land grants, are making their last desperate and united struggle in this Ohio contest, if it should go against them; and the indications of treachery on the Democratic side are consequently conspicuous and shameful. Their Democratic partners and strikers are doing all that can be done by half-masked treason to give the victory to BLAINE. If the friends of BLAINE fail to carry the Republican State of Ohio in this fight, a tremendous clamor for his withdrawal will arise from the ranks of his own party, and nothing else will save it from disintegration as well as defeat.

A Good Word for Glover.

From the Globe-Democrat.

St. Louis ought to have at least one Republican Congressman; but she can much better afford to take an upright and capable Democrat than to indorse systematic and unblushing bribery, and consent to the use of a seat in Congress, in her name, as a mere advertisement for patent medicines.

SATURDAY CHAT.

FROM the present outlook there will soon be a large body of fine looking, stalwart young men in search of employment. Since the Morosini elopement and the subsequent affaires du cœur between young ladies and their fathers' coachmen, there has been a great change in the style of the coaching fraternity. The physique of the men shows signs of degeneracy. They are greatly deteriorating in good looks, and there is an average of about fifteen years added to their ages. It used to be that people with coaches prided themselves on the handsome faces and stalwart figures which their liveries adorned, but I understand that this is a quiet but determined movement on the part of the fathers of eligible daughters, to substitute ugly and decrepit old men in their places. It is cruel to thus close the broad and fertile fields, just opened to handsome young men to obtain wealthy wives, but the fiat has apparently gone forth, and the effect may be seen in the caricatures of men who will henceforth hold the ribbons for stylish turnouts.

HERE is a bit of conversation that I picked up on the street the other day. An old gentlemen and a young gentleman walking together have just met and parted after a few minutes' conversation with a distinguished friend of the former, in which the old gentleman failed to introduce his young friend, and says apologetically and innocently:

"I should have introduced you to Judge —— but he is very busy and is a stranger in the city, and then, you know, I don't want to introduce every Tom, Dick and Harry, and all the riff-raff to him." Young man smiles and looks a little surprised, and, the old gentleman catching on, begins to redden up and adds stammeringly: 'I mean—that is—I meant to say that—that I didn't know whether he—I mean whether you would care to meet him."

NUMBERS of letters are received daily at the Post Office which are misdirected, half-directed or on which the addresses are almost illegible. The officials try every means in their power to send them to their destination without resorting to the dead-letter office at Washington, where is the only authority to open them outside of the sender or receiver. There is a special department where such letters are placed and where the most expert guessers and decipherers are kept employed. If the letter be directed to some person in the city with an uncertain address, the names are read out to the assembled carriers and the one who knows of the person takes the letter and delivers it or directs where it should be delivered. Nearly all local letters are easily delivered in this way, no matter what mistakes may be made in addresses. But there are numbers received to be forwarded which require skillful work to discover where they are bound for.

SOME curious blunders and omissions may be found in the vast quantities of mail matter passing through the office. Sometimes everything except the State, or the county, or the town, or the name are omitted from the address, and the wits of the clerks are put to severe trials. Not long ago a package was received directed to a young lady in Illinois, her county only being given. The package appeared to contain an album, and the official divined that it was a present and would be followed by a letter. He proved to be right, for a letter came on the heels of it to the same name, but, curiously enough, the town only was written on the letter. The clerk wrote out the full address on the letter and forwarded it. A few days afterward he telegraphed to the postmaster, asking if such a person lived there. The answer came back at once: "Yes, and she wants her bundle mighty bad."

THE dense ignorance of foreigners about America is noticeable from the letters received from abroad. Towns, counties and States are located in the addresses with the most reckless disregard for geography; in fact, the prevailing impression in Europe seems to be that the geography of America is directly the reverse of the actual facts, and also that every one in America knows every one else and that it is only necessary to mention a name and State to have a letter promptly delivered. New Mexico is frequently made to embrace some half dozen States and Territories, and letters are received addressed to people at such and such a ranch in Texas and Nebraska, as if the names of the ranches in the country was a matter of common school education.

AN old lady at the Exposition the other day looked all through the hatchery and was deeply interested in the operations of the incubator, because she said she raised chickens herself and it was heaps of trouble watching "settin'" hens. When she had finished seeing all there was to be seen she asked to be shown the patent rooster. She thought the whole business of raising chickens was to be done by a patent process and was much astonished when she found such was not the case.

SPEAKING of chickens reminds me of the great profit there is in raising them, and of how much money could be made by chicken-farming in the neighborhood of a great city. I heard of a lady in the city who utilized a couple of cellars as a small chicken-farm during the winter, and made a marvelous success out of it. At an original cost of $10 she put twenty chickens into the cellars. The feed for the fowls cost nothing, as the scraps from the table were amply sufficient for them, and, although she had a number of boarders, the chickens supplied her table with eggs and she realized $49 in cash from the sale of the surplus eggs. Altogether she estimated that she cleared not less than $100 on her investment in one winter.

I SEE that the old clothes men have hung out the usual sign for this time of the year and the front door of each shop is ornamented with a spiked tail coat which has seen more or less service. The de rigueur rule of the V. P.'s ball places the semi-society young man in a delicate situation and compels him to slip into his old friend's establishment after dark and get as good a fit as possible. He is a singularly fortunate youth who has a friend, who is not going to the ball, who has a dress suit about his size. As is generally the case, however, I presume that many who can easily afford to buy dress suits will appear in the regulation business suits and parti-colored neckties, and thus another full-dress affair will pass into history as a farce. The ladies, of course, will all be gorgeously attired.

THE WEEK ABROAD.

MANIFESTATIONS of love between young men and women are usually regarded in the light of amusing incidents and never fail to bring out a smile from spectators of the spooning. The victims of the fun usually grin and bear it or seek some more secluded spot where these affectionate demonstrations can be hidden. A Frenchman, however, has started the fashion of presenting evidences of mirth when a man and his sweetheart are engaged in the earnest occupation of making love to each other. A murder is reported in the French papers which arose from an incident of this kind. Three young men were seated in the Buttes-Chaumont one Sunday evening, the place being crowded with pedestrians, when one of them noticed a man slyly embracing a woman on the other side of the seat on which they were. He immediately called the attention of his companions to the pair and the trio were preparing to have lots of fun at the expense of the loving couple. The man, however, saw them laughing at him and flew into such a rage that he drew a knife and attacked the young men, inflicting a mortal wound on one of them.

SOME of the English papers are making out that the feeling against England is running so high in France that it is unsafe for an Englishman to walk the streets of Paris. A journal has been started called the anti-Anglais, which is full of abuse of England and Englishmen. The French people and papers deny that any such feelings exist, whatever may be the relations between the two governments, and we are anxious to have it known that Englishmen are treated as courteously as ever by the Parisians. The secret of this anxiety to soothe the English lies in the fact that an immense amount of money is dropped by the English in French shops, and already the foreign trade has been too much interfered with by the cholera panic. No matter what opinion a Frenchman may entertain concerning "Perfidious Albion," they are always ready to take Albion's cash for French goods.

A CONFERENCE which promises to be full of interest, especially in view of the agitation of land and labor questions in the old world, will be held in London this winter. It is to be a convention of artisans, capitalists, and all persons interested in the study of social problems. The idea is to get the problems thoroughly discussed from all standpoints. A strong committee has the matter in charge, and considerable funds have already been subscribed. The statistical society is collecting statistics with regard to labor, land and capital conditions in all parts of the world, for the use of the convention.

THE Cafe de la Rotouche in the Palais Royal, one of the historical relics of Old Paris, is about to be destroyed. It was founded as far back as 1792, by a vallet of Louis XXI, named Cuisinier, and was frequented at first by the ladies of the commune and Bohemian artists. The place was then known as the Cellar, and was famed for the beauty of the proprietor's wife. Afterwards as the meeting place of the delegates of peace, it was called the Peace Pavilion. It was a favorite dueling and quarreling place for French and foreign officers during the invasion, and became notorious in this way. The building will be taken down as soon as the present lease expires.

THE people of Stonehaven in Kincardineshire, a popular seaside resort, are agitated over a rather singular matter which has been occasioned by some zealous clergymen who insist on preaching at the hour when bathing is most indulged in by the visitors. There is no evidence that the good people object to the preaching per se, but they charge that the preachers always choose the place for holding services on that portion of the beach which is reserved for ladies who wish to bathe and that the pulpit commands an excellent view of the nymphs playing in the water and on the beach in costumes not suitable for mixed company. It is regarded as peculiar that such places should be the only ones which satisfy the clergymen, and the attention of the town council has been called to the matter with a view of preventing its recurrence.

THERE is imminent danger of war between Paris and the rest of France arising from a warm dispute between the Municipal Council and the Minister of the Interior. The official residence of the Prefect of the Seine has always been in the Hotel de Ville, where apartments have been set aside for his especial use. The apartments in the new Hotel de Ville have never been occupied by the Prefect because they have not been fully completed. The completion of them last month made it possible for him to take possession of them, but the municipal council, which is hostile to the Prefect as the representative of the Government, passed a resolution to the effect that he would have to seek lodgings elsewhere, as these apartments were wanted for the Mayor of Paris. The Minister annulled the resolution, and ordered the Prefect to remove to the hotel before the middle of October. The councillors feel outraged, and declare that they will prevent such action on the part of the Prefect if they have to die for it. Paris is watching the outcome of the struggle with interest and amusement.

THE American newsboy would have a short career in Paris, especially if he should attempt to sell sensational newspapers. There is a remarkable law in France providing that vendors of newspapers or pamphlets shall not be permitted to cry out anything but the titles of the publication, and especially prohibiting the calling out of the contents, particularly if they be of a sensational nature. The Police Department have called the attention of the officers to this law, and has ordered its strict enforcement. Another curious order of the Prefect which has been promulgated, forbids the exhibition of deformed children and unnatural people and monsters of any kind. The order is having a disastrous effect on cheap museums, as most of their attractions are drawn from this class of people.

A CURIOSITY in the shape of a cat with only one eye has been found in France. The single eye is placed in the center of the cat's forehead, like the eye of the fabled cyclops, and is large, well-shaped and of a bright yellow color. The director of the Jardin des Plantes, is negotiating for it to place among his curiosities. The owner holds his cat at the rather high price of $1,000.

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 4.—The WORLD says: "The great spontaneous uprising at Buffalo is an evidence that the people are sensible of the one great issue involved in the approaching election, that they are stirred by the sincere conviction that the safety of the Republic is involved in the contest, that the success of Grover Cleveland means not only honest, clean-handed Government, but the vindication of the right of the citizens to change their political rules, and to inaugurate the President chosen by the majority. The Buffalo ovation indicates a glorious victory for Grover Cleveland in the Empire State."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "The people's party is not in the interest of Blaine any more than it is in the interest of Cleveland. It is a protest against both these candidates and the parties which nominated them. As against Blaine, it makes the protest which the foolish and fatal action of the Democratic Convention failed to make. As against Cleveland, it is a declaration in favor of a better Democrat and a more genuine Democracy. As against both parties, it concentrates the long dissatisfaction of years, and the growing disgust with dough-face politics. The People's party exists for itself, and not as an annex to any other party. It is against Blaine and Cleveland. It is of and for the people."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "Because his election would be the rebuke of the most threatening vice of our time and country, the spirit of reckless speculation in business and of shameless jobbery in politics, the two are one coil. The election of James G. Blaine would be a direct appeal to every young man to adopt dishonesty and effrontery as the methods of success. These are some of the reasons which justify Republicans in supporting a candidate not of their party. The American people must elect as President, James G. Blaine, corruptionist, or Grover Cleveland, reformer. For which, reader, will you cast your vote?"

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "In any other land, at any other time in the history of this country, it would be deemed incredible that a majority of the people could forgive or tolerate such a crime against their rights. When New York casts 1,100,000 votes or more, thereby showing what policy the majority of the people in this State prefer, they are liable to be over-ruled and defeated by a set of unscrupulous scoundrels in other States, a minority there, armed, not with justice, but with weapons of murder. Unless the Northern States are more nearly united in opinion than they have been in some former elections, that 'vote' at the South, which is not free nor honest, may turn the scales. In effect, then, we shall have the country ruled, and its policy shaped, perhaps for many years, not by the will of the people, but by the will of the shot-gun. If that is not the sort of government the Northern people want, they have but a few weeks in which to mature and express their will so decisively that it shall not be overcome."

A Schism Developes in the Memorial Colored Church of Brooklyn.

Br'er Bacon, Sexton and Change Pastor, Having Refused the Pas to Br'er Johnson, Ex-Deacon, the Latter Attempts to Administer Bodily Chastisement—The Sequel is in a Justice Shop Where the Flagitious Deacon is Fined $10.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 4.—Aaron Johnson, ex-deacon of the Berean Baptist Church for colored people, and Joseph Bacon, sexton and change preacher for the Memorial Colored Church, which holds worship in the top floor of a building at Cumberland and Fulton streets, Brooklyn, were, with a dozen or more dusky church members, in Justice Walsh's court yesterday. Johnson and Bacon were there on business. Both men claimed to have been assaulted and each made charges of assault and battery against the other. Deacon Johnson and Sister Louisa Fields and Sister Charlotte Jackson were the principal witnesses on one side. According to their sworn statements the disturbance occurred on Sunday evening last. The prayer-meeting in the Memorial Church had just been opened. Parson Roberts was giving out the hymn, when Deacon Johnson entered, a little late. Brother Bacon, the sexton and preacher, occupied the chair which is known as the "deacon's seat." Deacon Johnson asked Brother Bacon to vacate the deacon's chair. The aged sexton refused. The deacon and the sexton became angry. Sister Jackson, in order to restore harmony, struck the sexton on the head with her palm leaf fan. Bacon seized a chair and tried to drive Johnson through the floor with it. The congregation, six in number, rose to its feet, as one man, to quell the disturbance. Johnson believed his life was in danger. He seized Bacon beneath the chin and endeavored to persuade him that his course was most unchristian like and not calculated to impress the sisters with meekness of heart. Bacon, according to Johnson's story, was in no humor to receive wholesome advice. He attempted to draw something from his pocket. It might have been a match-box, but the witness did not believe it was.

Arraigned against the Johnson faction were Brother C. Gideon Roberts, the preacher; Sexton Bacon and Charlotte Bacon, his wife. After Brother Roberts had told the court that, from his standpoint in the pulpit, the appeared, to the best of his knowledge and belief, to be Brother Johnson, Charlotte Bacon took the stand. She wanted to explain certain matters in the history of the Church, and started by telling something about her grandfather's maxim that honesty was always the best policy. The magistrate smiled and told her to tell what happened on Sunday night. With a grieved look the witness said that Mrs. Jackson struck her "ole man" on the nose with her fan and knocked his specs from their proper position. He went on singing, as if nothing had happened, until Johnson hit him on the ear. Then the witness solemnly testified that she hit Mrs. Jackson with a chair. When Brother Bacon was called to the stand he looked appealingly at the Judge and then exhibited a very large rent in a very ragged vest. Johnson, he said, had torn it when he grabbed the witness. Johnson hit him first. The witness, to return the compliment, "pasted Johnsing over de eye." Sister Louisa Fields, a member of the church choir, testified that Brother Bacon had caused numerous dissensions in the church. As a preacher, he was not a success. The church had been "pulled down flat" on his account. The congregation was rendered unhealthy by his presence. Papers which were submitted in evidence showed that Johnson had been expelled from the Beacon Church for not walking in the straight and narrow way. After other evidence, which reflected more or less on the characters of both Bacon and Johnson, had been heard, Justice Walsh informed the latter that it was his candid belief that he had told more than one falsehood while seated in the witness chair. Bacon appeared to be more truthful. Johnson was then fined $10 and with that peculiar, half-supposed utterance which denotes satisfaction, the colored people left the court room.

Daniel Ort, a Once Respectable Hollander, Enacts a Dance House Tragedy.

Refused Further Support by His Paramour, He Attempts Her Life and Then Shoots Himself—The Woman's Devotion to Her Worthless Lover—A Scene From the Slums of New York.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

New York, October 4.—As a rule, business does not begin at the Belmonico Garden, No. 192 Chatham Square, until the evening is well advanced, and the three long rows of round tables in the barn-like hall were almost vacant at 7 o'clock last evening. Suddenly the voice of the untuned piano was interrupted by two sharp reports and a piercing cry. The listeners saw a man and woman lying almost side by side on the saw-dusted floor. Blood flowed from the man's temple, and his right hand held a cheap new five-shooter. As the girls who frequent the place soon discovered, the woman was uninjured, but had fallen into a swoon. The man was dead. He appeared to be about thirty years old, was of the medium height and build, with a dark complexion and moustache and black hair. Attracted by the reports and the bustle in the hall, a crowd soon collected outside. The unsteady glare of the electric lights fell upon the faces of the foremost, while those in the rear seemed a confused mass in the shadow of the elevated railroad. A tall, sunburnt man with unkempt, tawny hair, came to the door of the Belmonico and yelled "Police." Roundsman John J. Joyce, with a half-dozen other officers, responded, and kept back the surging crowd. He who lay dead on the sawdust, was Daniel Ort of No. 1 Canal street. Thirty-one years ago he was born in Holland, where his parents still live. They are said to be wealthy. From time to time they sent him money, which he lost in gambling or spent for liquor. In the Pacific Garden, No. 54 Bowery, he met Emma Stock two years ago. He told her that he had plenty of money and persuaded her to live with him. They occupied apartments in various streets of the Tenth and Thirteenth Wards. After three months Ort's money gave out and Emma supported him by her labor in various low dives, like the Belmonico. It appears that the girl's attachment for her worthless lover was although he spent her "earnings" on race courses and in saloons. He treated her none too well and one day, about two weeks ago, while Ort was at the races, Emma quietly transferred her quarters from No. 1 Canall street to No. 105 Forsyth street. That very day she had given him $12 50. Deprived of his only source of revenue, Ort was soon at the verge of pauperism. According to the girl's story, told with sobs and tears in the Elizabeth Street Station, she did not see him from the time of their separation until last night, but, hearing of his poverty, sent him money by her associates. The people in the saloon say that Ort haunted the place in the early morning and accosted Emma as she came out, begging her to give him money. These appeals were never in vain, although often the girl could give Ort but half a dollar. Even this was greedily accepted. The cashier of the Belmonico is a fat, coarse-featured woman, whose black hair is parted on the side and whose plain dark dress is relieved by a showy watch chain. To her Ort declared that if Emma would only live with him again, he would work hard to support her instead of living upon the profits of her degradation. He went to the saloon at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, dressed in a neat black suit and a reasonably clean shirt. He had a long, earnest talk with Emma Storch at one of the round tables, making all sorts of fine promises and begging for money as usual She had two five dollar bills in her pocket and gave him one of them, but she positively refused to renew the old relations, and Ort went sullenly away, returning in four hours. Again Emma and he conversed and again he entreated her to come back to his second-story fireside on Canal street.

"Emma," he said, "If you keep on this way I shall sink into a tramp. You wouldn't like that, surely?"

With a toss of the head she intimated that it made no difference to her. He sat at the first table of the middle row. Very few patrons were yet in the place. The Hollander wanted more money and Emma went to the cashier's desk to get her other bill changed. She handed Ort $2 and he went out. He came back in a few minutes and resumed his former position. The young woman sat beside him. The talked in low, quick tones, while the much abused piano tinkled out a pitiful version of "My Queen," and a with a rattan stick, stood on the sidewalk and assured pedestrians that the very liveliest kind of performance was going on within. Emma Storch was seen to shake her head decisively and rise up from her chair. Ort sprang up also. Then came the shot and the scream. The first bullet passed close to Emma's head, and she dropped senseless as quickly as though she had been actually shot. Believing that his purpose had succeeded, Ort put a bullet into his own brain. Bar-tender Peter Stalder, Louisa Schmidt of No. 240 First avenue, Sophie Kleinhaust of No. 24 Bowery, Alexandria Furth of 45 Christie street, and Mary Meyer of No. 18 Bayard street ran to the spot where the two bodies lay. Minnie Etinger of 176 Forsyth street, and Emily Morgensen of 106 Canal street, hurried up stairs from "Constitution Hall," a basement hall even lower in all senses than the Belmonico. The women carried their unconscious companion to a sofa where her first sign of animation was hysterical sobbing. On a permit from Coroner Kennedy, Ort's body was sent to No. 27 Mott street. Emma Storch put on a Gainsborough hat and covered her plain black dress with a gossamer waterproof. She drew on long undressed kid gloves and was taken to the station house by order of Sergeant Thompson. There she told a disconnected story embodying what is narrated above. She said that some time ago Ort's father sent him $400, of which she received $100 and put it in the Bowery Savings Bank. After repeating her account to the Coroner, she tottered behind the desk and covered her face with her gloved hands. She is short, dark and no prettier than the most of her class. The women Morgensen and Ettinger, Stalder and the man with tawny locks were also held. All protested entire innocence of the affair and begged to be let go. The man said his name was John Christopher Dooley of No. 2331 Third avenue, a foreman in the department of public parks. He objected strongly to spending the night in the station house. He wanted the doorman to go for Judge Duffy, and fished from his pocket a crumpled bill to defray the expense of the expedition, but he was locked up, all the same.

Do Not Miss It.

The thorough appointment of the Custom House has been well demonstrated by the test put upon it by the breaking of the water pipe crossing Ninth street, and now being repaired by the city. At first it seemed inevitable that the elevators would have to cease running for want of water, but the huge tanks on the roof have been brought into use, and the elevators, boilers and all parts of the building, are fully supplied to-day.

STOOD ON VELVET.

A Phrase Borrowed From the Now Obsolete Game of Draw Poker.

Indicative, However, of Mr. Blaine's Attitude in His Various Speculative Enterprises, Which, Being Interpreted, Means That the Maine Statesman "Chipped In" His Official Name Against His Associates' Money, and then "Stood to Win the Pot"—A Glaring Instance in the Standard Iron and Coal Company—Wails From the Worsted.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, October 4.—From time to time it becomes more and more apparent that the connection of Mr. James G. Blaine with speculations similar to that of the Little Rock are very numerous, where the great Maine statesman has been persuaded for a consideration to lend his name to enterprises of doubtful character. Among these are what may be called the Standard Coal and Iron Company, in which Mr. Blaine is a director, and which has obtained all of the value which it ever possessed from the fact his name was connected with it. F. J. Stone, who has had a disastrous pecuniary interest in this concern from the first and has had cause to regret that he ever heard the name, said yesterday, in relation to this company: "Four or five years ago a corporation was organized under the laws of Ohio authorized to issue $25,000,000 of stock and $12,000,000 of bonds, and among the directors were James G. Blaine, Stephen B. Elkins, William Walter Phelps and others. The corporate name, as you will perceive, closely resembled that of the Standard Oil Company and clearly conveyed the idea to the public that it was equally as profitable. As a fact, however, the property owned by the company was of vero little value, and its bonds were practically worthless. Mr. Blaine's position as a director in this company, however, was a guarantee for its solvency, and doubtless induced very many people to put their money into the concern. It was a guarantee of the securities of the company and the use of his name is believed to have been one of the worst stock value of the watering transactions of the age. The whole cash assets is but barely sufficient to preclude its being bought on accotnt of legal fraud for over capitalization. At present the bonds have only a nominal value and the stock has no quotable value whatever, but those who know regard Mr. Blaine's directorship in the company as a quasi indorsement of it, and it is rumored that Mr. William D. Lee, who has appeared lately as Mr. Blaine's vindicator, traded lately a lot of the bonds for a house in Fifth avenue, but that he was afterwards induced to reconvey the property. The fact is that and Blaine knew it to be such when he lent to it his name and influence. I can buy for you in the market to-day as much of its stock as you desire to purchase at 5 cer cent., although it has sold, since the bottom dropped out, at par, the name of Mr. Blaine having been lent to it and having giving to it a value which otherwise it could never have obtained."

Another gentleman said: "Blaine's connection with the Standard Coal and Iron Company is even worse than his lying about its troubles with its workmen at Hocking Valley, where American citizens were turned out to starve, while imported cheap labor did the work. Wm. D. Lee told me that, to use his own words, 'Blaine stood on velvet in the matter,' which I took to mean that for the use of his name he was to have superior advantages. Blaine's name as a director virtually indorsed the enormous, if not criminal, over capitalization, when the assets were really of little value. It is the dirtiest piece of business that ever any man, holding a public office or in private life, went into. And, look at the beautiful trio in this scheme: Blaine, Elkins, his partner in his West Virginia and New Mexico enterprises, and Phelps, to whom he recently wrote a pathetic letter. I am glad the world is going to show up the enormity of the transaction, and it is a question in my mind whether Blaine and his co-directors cannot be held personally responsible, and sued in court. I would not give $100,000 for all the real estate of the company, and believe the bonds to be practically worthless. Will the innocent shareholders of this company vote for Blaine as director of the nation? Not much, I think. Blaine's record as a 'speculator on velvet' is worse, if it could be possible, than his official record."

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Retail Prices of Sundry Supplies That Cheer the Inner Man.

In spite of the hot wave that came down on the market like a wolf on the fold, there has been a good time in Union Market the past week except in meats and game. In the former the trouble lay in the consumer's stomach. In the latter the difficulty existed in the poor quality of stuff shipped in. There has been no lowering of prices in venison, because only the best has been offered, the inferior grades being too distinctly bad to be imposed upon the public. Venison for steaks sells for 25c per pound and for roasts at 20c. Calves' meat has been very plentiful and has brought almost any price, dealers being glad to get it out of the way. The outlook for next week, however, indicates they will be scarce. Butter and eggs have enjoyed such a good demand that they maintain their old prices, eggs being held at 20c. Spring chickens are just now at their best, and in a few more days will fall into the tough and grisly period. Feeding on the stubble of the fields makes them fat and healthy. They bring $2 75 to $3 25 a dozen. Prairie chickens are hard to get in good condition, and as a consequence grouse are held at the former high figure. Snipe have made their appearance and are somewhat scarce at $1 50. In fruits, grapes and peaches abound, but the cantaloupe has turned its face to the wall for a season's sleep. Watermelons are also near their end, being very small and overripe. The heavy rains have spoiled the tomato crop, and as a result the price has doubled. Turnips are new and sell for 30 cents per peck.

The following are to-day's prices: Fruits—peaches, 40@60c ℔ basket; grapes, 10c per lb, 3 lb for 25c; watermelons, 5c to 25c a piece. Frogs, $2 per doz. Wood-cock, $1. Wood-duck, 50c per pair. Grouse $1 per pair. Teal ducks, 50c per pair; mallards, 75c; squirrels, 15c apiece. Butter—Elgin, 35c; Iowa, 30c; fancy dairy, 27½; choice do, 20c; country, 12½ to 20c. Poultry—Spring chickens $2 75 to $4 per dozen. Meats—Loin beef, 15 to 18c per pound; rib beef, 10 to 12½c per pound; mutton, 2 to 12½c per pound; lamb, 50c to $1 50 per quarter at retail; pork 10@12½ per pound; veal, 12½ to 15c per pound; corn beef 8 to 10c per pound; kidneys 12 to 15c apiece; tongues, 35 to 40c apiece; sweetbreads, 25 to 40c; lamb-fries, 20c; calves' liver, 30c; calves, brains, 10c; calves' head $1; sausage, 12½ to 15c per pound; ox-tail, 5 to 10c. Vegetables—Tomatoes, 75c to $1 per bushel; soup bunches, 5c, 40c per dozen; cabbage 30c per dozen; parsley 5c; cucumbers 4 for 5c; lettuce, 3 bunches for 5c; summer squash, 2 for 5c; beets, 5 bunches for 10c; potatoes, 15c per peck; egg plant 5c to 15c apiece; new carrots 5 bunches for 10c; string beans 5c per quart, 10c to 15 per peck; home corn, 20c per dozen; wax beans, 15c per peck; green gumbo, 10c per qt. Home-grown sweet potatoes 15c to 25c ℔ peck; butter beans 10c ℔ qt; lima beans 15 per qt; celery 50c a dozen; pumpkins, 10c to 25c apiece, horseradish 10c per root; radishes 3 bunches for 5c; oyster plant 4 bunches for 10c; endive 3 heads for 10c; red cabbage 15c to 25c per head; spinach 20c per peck.

STREET ILLUMINATIONS.

Hours During Which the Jets Will be Lighted—Other Arrangements.

The contractors for the erection of the fixtures for the street illumination, put on an extra force of men and boys this morning and set them to work placing the globes in position. The work was begun on Fourth street and before night that thoroughfare will be completed. The designs in the arrangement of the globes are very artistic special attention being given to combination of colors. The top of the trees are surmounted by an amber-colored globe; these below are three red ones, the next being white. The designs for the arches between the trees are varied. One of the prettiest is arranged with two light red globes at each end, then two dark red ones and, alternately, a dark blue or green in the center.

The illumination will begin on Monday night. The committee has decided that the illumination will not last as late as last year. By 7 o'clock p. m. all will be lighted, and at 10 o'clock the work of extinguishing will commence. This rule will be enforced every evening, except Tuesday, when the gas will be turned off at midnight. The gas company has, however, granted permission to continue the illumination later than 10 o'clock any evening, provided there are crowds on the streets. To insure the fixtures against possible damage, Chief Harrigan, at the request of the committee, has issued orders to the police not to allow any one to hitch horses to the upright pipes. In case of rain the arches and trees will not be lighted, but should the weather be clear as late as 8:30 o'clock, the illumination will take place.

The St. Louis Gaslight Company has offered to donate a lot of ground if the committee will erect a building for the storage of the fixtures. Mr. Sobolewski, superintendent of the company, will furnish the plans free of cost. The building is to be so constructed that the arches can be stored in it without being taken apart.

Unparalleled Success.

The Provident Mutual Protective Association, 219 Chestnut street, is an institution of which St. Louis may well be proud. Its plans and objects are such as to commend it to all intelligent people, and it has by its fair dealing and conservative management won the confidence and patronage of thousands of our citizens, and, to-day ranks among the foremost benevolent organizations in this country. This paper was one of the first to advocate its advantages to the working classes, and has thus contributed in a large measure toward its success.

THE SEASON'S EVENT.

Some Interesting Points on Toilets for the Veiled Prophet's Ball.

The ladies of the city are on tiptoe of expectation over the annual dress parade of society at the Veiled Prophet's ball. They have been deep in the mysteries of evening toilets, and each particular fair one who has been favored with an invitation is doubtless, by this time, contemplating the result of her efforts to appear as beautiful as possible and to outshine every one else. When the larger matters have been attended to these are innumerable little articles which are so essential to the perfection of a toilet, and none more so than the single item of gloves. Gloves are worn longer than usual this season, and there is not a lady going to the ball who does not want the proper caper if the result should be an entire kid suit buttoned up the back and down the front. The question is where can they be gotten cheapest and best, as they are no inconsiderable item of cost, and this question is easily answered. B. Nugent & Bro., who have made a reputation on the cheapness and excellence of their gloves, have made especial preparations to supply gloves for evening wear. In their glove department may be found all of the latest styles and shades of mousquetaires, varying in length from six to twenty buttons. All of the newest and most delicate shades to suit tastes in the greatest variety are to be found there. The prices are marvelously low, as the finest evening gloves may be purchased at from $1 to $2 lower than the prices prevailing elsewhere. This firm is selling gloves at prices absolutely below competition, and those desiring them should examine the stock by all means.

TALK FOR TEEMER.

Gaudaur's Backer Anxious For a Race Immediately.

Mr. St. John Accepts the Published Terms—Standing of the Clubs in the Three Base-Ball Associations—Diamond Chips—Sporting Gossip.

Mr. James A. St. John, as backer of Gaudaur, has expressed his willingness time and again to pit his favorite oarsman against any oarsman of any standing in the country. He has showed a remarkable spirit of determination in pushing matters to a business basis where he could meet half way the backer or backers of any sculler willing to row. Since Gaudaur's great victory at Creve Cœur Lake over Hosmer, Mr. St. John has been particularly directing his attention to make a match with Teemer, who also has been very successful of late. He not only regarded the move as an excellent one for the meeting of these young giants at Creve Cœur, but has gone further, and offered the most liberal terms, in order that the match might be consummated this fall. Teemer—or his right-hand man, Eph. Morris—has expressed a desire, through the Boston Herald, to row Gaudaur for $1,000—$500 a side—allowing $100 for expenses.
"I consider that perfectly fair and proper, and I will allow Teemer $100 for his expenses to come to St. Louis and row Jake three miles with a turn for $500 a side at Creve Cœur Lake," said Gaudaur's backer. "I received a letter this morning from Eph. Morris asking on what terms a race would be arranged. I have stated my proposition, by telegraph and letter, and it only remains for Morris and Gaudaur to accept the terms offered."
"If Teemer means business I do not think the race at Pittsburg with Conley will in any way interfere with his acceptance of mine," said Mr. St. John in response to a query. In the meantime Jake Gaudaur is keeping in trim and takes a regular course of training every day. He is ready to meet any sculler, and will make mud-throwers take water.

The American Association.
The interest in this championship race centres in the fight for second place, between the Louisvilles, Columbus, St. Louis and Cincinnatis, as the Mets have almost a sure thing of carrying off the firs honors. The importance of the fight for the tail end looms up when the vascillation of Pittsburg and Indianapolis is viewed. Following is the summary to date:

Clubs.	Athletic	Baltimore	Brooklyn	Cincinnati	Columbus	Indianapolis	Louisville	Metropolitan	Pittsburg	Richmond	St. Louis	Toledo	Games won	Average won
Athletic		8	6	6	4	4	4	2	8	9	2	8	57	.500
Baltimore	5		5	6	5	5	5	10	10	5	4	5	57	.375

To-Morrow's Game.
To-morrow afternoon the St. Paul Club make their last appearance here, facing the St. Louis Unions, who will again have Dolan and Sweeny, their big battery, in. The game will be called at 3 o'clock with the nines placed in this way:

St. Louis	Position	St. Paul
Dolan	Catcher	Gannzel
Sweeny	Pitcher	Galvin
Quinn	First Base	Dunn
Dunlap	Second Base	Hengle
Gleason	Third Base	O'Brien
Whitehead	Short Stop	Werrick
Boyle	Left Field	Tilley
Rowe	Center Field	Barnes
Shafer	Right Field	Carroll

St. Louis vs. Cincinnati.
A letter received by President Lucas from Justus Thorne, president of the Cincinnati Unions, this morning, stated that McCormick and Briody would be the battery in both games. The Cincinnatis play here on Monday and Tuesday next. Sweeney and Dolan will pitch and catch for the St. Louis in both games, and the staying qualities of the two great pitchers will thus be put to the real test.

To-Morrow's Athletic Tournament.

During each event Prof. Vollrath's Band will furnish music, which will be a new feature at athletic meetings. The whole affair will be under the supervision of experienced gentlemen and a large crowd is expected. Games will commence at 1:30 sharp.

Gymnasium Notes.
An entertainment for the opening of the fall campaign is talked of at the Gymnasium. It will be an excellent means of keeping gymnastic matters on the move.
Manager John A. Stockwell is meeting with a good deal of encouragement in the advocacy of his plan for the establishment of schools of physical culture. It is generally alluded to as the American Gymnasia, and if it once becomes established it will be a notable achievement in the development of physical culture.

Diamond Chips.
The L. Clovers will cross bats with the Stars for the fourth time this season, defeating them three times before.
The Shamrocks will play two games Sunday at Compton Avenue Park—at 10 a. m. with the Todd-Stanley, and at 3 p. m. with the Wedge House.
The Philadelphias failed to get a single hit off Getzein at Detroit October 1. Getzein and Gastfield were members of "dot little German band," otherwise known as the Grand Rapids.
The Cleveland Club has signed for this and next season Charles Krieg, who was a member of the Chicago and Pittsburg Unions until they disbanded. He will catch, and will report for duty on Wednesday.
The St. Louis University nine has been reorganized for the balance of the season, with the following players: James Good, p.; Harry Scullin, c.; Dave Riley, 1 b.; John Hohman, 2 b.; Ed Martin, 3 b.; O. Bauer, s. s.; Jos. Good, c. f.; James Byrnes, r. f.; Bis McCartney, l f. Challenges from nines whose players are about 19, will be willingly accepted.
Mr. H. H. Morris has opened a boxing school at Jefferson avenue and Olive street under a plan that will make it very popular. The club is known as the St. Louis Association Boxing and Social Club. Certificates of membership, entitling the holder to instruction in the manly art and use of gloves, bells, etc., are issued at a very low figure. One hundred of these have already been taken.

Sporting Sundries.
The Association of which H. L. Dousman is president will hold a Fall trotting meeting at Prairie-du-Chein, October 7, 8 and 9. The Summer meeting was well attended and much enjoyed.
At Milwaukee on September 27 the pacer Johnston duplicated his record by pacing a mile in 2:10. On the same day the pacer Minnie R., with running mate, lowered her record three-quarters of a second to 2:09¼.
John Meagher, the professional champion walker, is training at Boston for his ten-mile race with Dennis Driscoll. The latter is doing his work at Franklin Park, Saugus. The race is for $250 a side, and will take place October 22. W. H. Meek, the ex-amateur walker, may enter the race. He has expressed a wish to do so, and the other men are willing that he should, provided he posts $250 and agrees to a 65 and 35 per cent division of the gate, the winner to take the full stakes.
John Teemer professes to be more than anxious—almost crazy—to row Edward Hanlan a race of three or five miles. "If I can't get a match with him any other way, I'm doggoned if I don't think I'll start after him the minute he reaches England. Great governor! how I'd like to get a race with him before he retires!" No doubt Hanlan is as anxious to row Teemer as Teemer professes to be to row Hanlan, but there is more money for the champion in Australia just now than in this country, where he could not get on a race for money, and where he grew tired of waiting for something to turn up.

Bessehl's Restaurant Open Again.
What stranger is there who has ever visited St. Louis and who has not heard of Bessehl's? What man, woman or child is there in the city to whom his name is not known? He and his restaurant are as firmly identified with St. Louis as Delmonico's is with New York City. Modestly recognizing this fact, Mr. Emil Bessehl wishes to inform his friends and patrons that his spacious restaurant and cozy oyster rooms, which have been closed for repairs, will be reopened to the public to-day at his old headquarters, Nos. 5 and 7 North Broadway (Fifth street). The buisness lunch, counters, and dining-room in the rear of the "Annex," the ladies' parlors and private dining-rooms on the second floor have all been refitted, renovated, and handsomely decorated and will be under the immediate supervision in the future of Mr. Bessehl himself. All delicacies in season, oysters, clams, shell fish, chops, steaks, and in short, everything that a first-class restaurant can supply will always be found on hand, cooked and served in the very best style.

Fighters of All Weights and Sizes and Both Sexes, Regardless of Previous Condition of Servitude—The Daisy Who Knocks Out All the Women—The Wiry Jap and the Noted Black Diamond.

The sporting fraternity grows instead of diminishing in numbers, and science with gloves, great wrestling powers and skill in a shell boat continue to prove attractive. The POST-DISPATCH presents herewith another batch of these worthies, all of whom have made their mark both in the ring and on the water, as well as on the bodies and reputations of their opponents:

DAISY DAILY.

The great female "knocker-out" is Daisy Daily. She "puts up" like a professional, spars with ease and skill, and sends her blows home in good style. She is muscularly developed and is considered what her name indicates—a "Daisy."

THE BLACK DIAMOND.

Henry Woodson, or, as he is better known, "The Black Diamond," came to New York from Troy. Like the famous Tom Molineaux, he loves "to scrap." Woodson is nearly jet black, but with a good-natured smile which parts his lips over two rows of almost perfect "ivories." His stature is gigantic and his muscular development wonderful. He has fought several battles with hard gloves and one with bare knuckles, the latter with a negro in Troy known as Bill Williams, whom he defeated in a long and punishing battle. "The Diamond" is at present in the West knocking out ambitious "coons," who tackle him nightly when he appears to participate in the events programmed by Bob Farrell, the manager of the troupe.

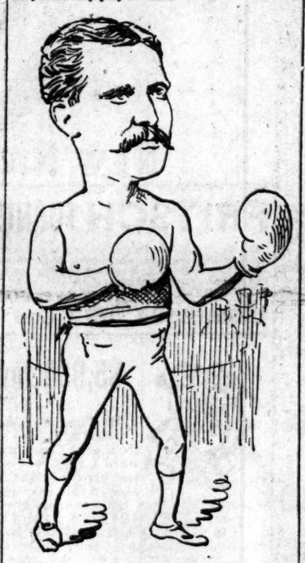

FRANK STEVENSON.

Almost every sporting man in the country knows Frank Stevenson. Although he has never figured inside the ring he has been outside of very many. He is a thorough New Yorker, having been born in the Fourteenth Ward thirty-nine years ago. He is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 198 pounds. Frank has clear, blue eyes, and once had a mass of dark brown hair on the pate which now shines in its baldness. Some years ago he started a saloon, which became a resort for members of the colored population. The police never have any trouble with the patrons of the place, which is known as the "Black and Tan." Frank is possessed of considerable means and has figured as a backer of pugilists and pedestrians. On any fine day he may be seen on the boulevards driving his fast trotter, Capt. Tuthill, named after an old friend.

THE JAP.

This almond-eyed Celestial rejoices in the high-sounding cognomen of Matsada Kogaree Sorakichi. He is 5 feet 6¼ inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds. He is 27 years old. He is the champion of America at the Japanese style of wrestling, simply because none of the wrestlers here know the game. The rules of that style make it a fall when any part of the body above the ankles touches the floor. "Mat" won the championship from forty competitors at the annual sports for the benefit of the Mikado. He has wrestled with Edward Bibby, Capt. Daly, and Duncan C. Ross and Joe Acton, the styles being mixed so as to give both men fair chances. Ross and Acton defeated "Mat," but Bibby and Daly were easy prey for him.

PADDY RYAN.

The hero of Troy and the pet of Chicago, is anxious to meet John L. Sullivan again and will wager that the Boston slugger cannot knock him out in four rounds according to the Marquis of Queensberry rules. Ryan's battle at Mississippi City, when Sullivan defeated him for the championship, lost him many friends. They believed that no man could have whipped him so easily, but subsequent developments proved that they were wrong and that Ryan was whipped on his merits. In person Ryan is a man with many good traits. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs in condition about 198 pounds. He will be backed by Jim Patterson for $1,000 against Sullivan for a four round contest and is now in training for the event.

MICHAEL DONOVAN.

The middle-weight champion has grown rusty of late because he has had no man to test his mettle. Not that Mike is stale at all, for he is not, his recent trip with John L. Sullivan serving to keep him in fair condition. Mike has a pleasant manner, and does not look like a fighting man. He has fought many hard battles, and with Prof. McClellan fought 3h. 49m. It was Mike Donovan who gave Cleary his first start. Of late he has confined himself to teaching boxing and backing pugilists. He has a saloon in Brooklyn, where there gathers nightly a crowd to hear the details of his battles. Mike is a well-built man, 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighs 158 pounds. He is one of the most scientific men in the country, and one of the gamest.

MIKE CLEARY.

Of late this fighter has lost friends by not doing as well as was expected. Cleary is a genial companion, and a man who is really out of his line when fighting. As a boxer he is scientific and game. He has a clever right hand when it is well, but he strained it when knocking out Sheriff and Jim Goode, and in his recent exhibitions. The short work he made of Sheriff both times they met, and his subsequent quick work with Goode, stamp him as a hard hitter. Cleary is a native of Philadelphia, where his parents settled after arriving from Ireland. He is thirty-two years old, 5 feet 8½ inches tall, and weighs 162 pounds in condition. He has been knocked out by Mitchell, fought a draw with McCaffrey, when the latter was but 18 years old, and a draw with Kilrain.

JAMES PILKINGTON.

This celebrated oarsman was born in Ohio thirty-nine years ago. When 17 years old he entered the Union army as a drummer-boy, but finally shouldered a musket. He served throughout the war, and then came to this city. He obtained a position on the police force, and served seven years as knight of the club. Three years ago he formed a co-partnership with P. E. Nagle and established a sporting resort in Harlem, N. Y. The firm made money, and this year established a summer resort at Oak Point, which is memorable as the scene of the Courtney-Ross fiasco and the Ross-Teemer race. In 1870 Mr. Pilkington began rowing, being at that time a member of the Seawhanaka Boat Club of Brooklyn. A year later he joined the Metropolitan Boat Club, and shortly afterwards was made captain of the club and stroke of the eight-oared crew. Mr. Pilkington is an affable gentleman of powerful physique. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall, and weighs 185 pounds.

CAPTAIN DAILEY.

Although but a private in the Sixty-ninth Regiment, New York, Mr. J. C. Dailey rejoices in the title of captain. He is a native of Cork, Ireland, thirty-two years old, 6 feet 1 inch tall, and weighs 190 pounds. He is one of the best all-round athletes in this country. He can run 100 yards in 11 seconds, walk a mile in 8 minutes 30 seconds, throw the six-teen-pound hammer 90 feet, put the shot 39 feet, throw the "fifty-six" 35 feet, clear 20 feet on a running jump. He is also a wrestler and boxer. He was defeated in a mixed wrestling match with the Jap, and won a glove fight on a foul from Joe Pendergast. He was defeated in a four-round contest by Hial H. Stoddard, after one of the most desperate encounters ever seen in a public hall.

BILLY M'COY.

Among the stanch friends of the prize ring is Billy McCoy. He does not do any sparring himself, being content to dispense fiery liquids. But by training and otherwise he is a natural sport. Whenever sluggers-out meet, there Billy McCoy can be found.

FRANK WHITE.

The present holder of the title of feather-weight champion is a native of New York City, and is about 25 years old. He stands 5 feet 4 inches tall, and weighs at present 138 pounds. His claim to the title is disputed by some people, who say that since Dick Hollywood retired with the title there has been no fight for it. There are few, however, who will go boldly to Frank and make the assertion—it would be dangerous to do so. Frank became noted through his famous fizzle with George Holden White is an agreeable man with a clean-shaven face and mild voice. His personal appearance, together with his style of dress, has caused him to be mistaken more than once for a clerical gentleman. Like Arthur Chambers, he has retired from the ring and established a "Champion's Rest."

CLUB CHAT.

The Season About to Begin—Parade Arrangements—Club Notes.

With the opening of the Fair the clubs begin to assume their wonted air of bustle and activity. There are but few club men in the city who have not some friends from other cities or from the rural districts to entertain. In such cases he usually makes the club his headquarters and secures a card for his friend, entitling him to all the privileges of a member. The number of visitors at the Mercantile Club during the past week has been unusually large, and next week it will even be larger. This, of course, is due to the fact that the majority of prominent merchants have memberships in the Mercantile, and it being a down-town club, they find it more convenient to entertain their country custom-ers there than to take them to the St. Louis, the Harmonie, Elks, Germania or other clubs farther removed from the business port ons of the city. The aristocratic bearing of the University, although a down-town club, precludes to a certain extent this general extension of invitations, while the Elks being more an evening than a day club has less attraction for the grays who are accustomed to rood with the chickens. Nevertheless all these clubs have had their quota of strangers recently and expect more or less of a rush next week.

The members of the St. Louis have erected a number of seats in the front yard adjoining the club house for the accommodation of their lady friends on the night of the Veiled Prophets' parade. In addition to these the club house will be thrown open and all the front windows utilized for the same purpose.

The members of the University will also make ample preparations to accommodate the lady friends of such members as may be pleased to visit the club house in the company with a member on the evening in question. Some two years ago there was no little displeasure manifested by the members of the club at the action of the house committee in regard to this same affair. They were asked time and again if members would be permitted to bring their lady friends to the club to view the parade and were invariably told that the committee had taken no action on the matter. On the night of the parade, however, imagine their surprise when upon visiting the club alone they beheld the members of the house committee safely and comfortably installed with their lady friends in the choicest windows of the house. There was considerable ill feeling created, but it soon blew over and since then it has been generally understood that the lower floors of the club are thrown open to members and their lady friends to witness any important street parade. Quite a number availed themselves of this privilege at the Trades' Display parade, and it is thought the parlors, library and sitting-rooms will be thronged with the elite of the City on next Tuesday night. Should the route of the Prophet's procession be changed from Nineteenth to Eighteenth street, as is rumored, it will deprive the members of the Harmonie Club from making use of the capacious windows of their club house. Should this not occur, however, they too, will invite their lady friends to enjoy with them the privileges of the club for that evening. The Standard Club is still thriving and has an unusually large membership roll. The Germania is undergoing repairs at present and the Liederkranz is preparing for the winter season, which will now soon set in through the mercury for the past week has been decidedly summerish. The new St. Louis Club House is nearly finished, and the more ardent members expect to have a house-warming over the side of congress the hearth and the massive lamps gracefully from the brilliantly lighted chandelier.

WOMEN'S WHIMS.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's Esthetic Boys.

Mrs. Astor's Greenhouses and Her Multitude of Flowers.

Rudeness of Men on New York Elevated Roads.

Some Unpleasant Habits of Indian Squaws—Fall Fashions and Fancies—Autumn Millinery—The Last Thing in Gloves—Some Bits of Gossip.

Mr. Oscar Wilde did not make a very great many comments during his stay in the United States. Indeed, a real esthete is quite a rarity—not quite so uuusual as a white crow, but still not very often met with; but when an American does become a devotee to the creed they really outdo the original esthetes themselves, and become even more intense than the very originators of the rage for straight flowing draperies, bright yellows and sickly greens.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, the well-known authoress, is one of these exceptions, and her craze for the picturesque extends not only to her inanimate surroundings, but to her two boys. A lady who has recently paid Mrs. Burnett a long visit is the authority for the state ment that they are very handsome boys. Their proud mother is quite aware of their beauty by keeping them dressed in a most becoming fashion. She taught them to pose in an artistic manner. If the bell rings and a visitor is announced, Mrs. Burnett turns to her sons and says: "Take your positions." Immediately the well-trained boys fall into the poses best suited to their dress and beauty. The older one will lean his elbow on the corner of the mantelpiece and rest his head upon his shapely hand, while the younger will stretch himself in a graceful attitude on the heavy fur rug in front of the fire. The visitor enters and cannot fail to be struck by the picturesque beauty of the scene and goes away, her mind full of admiration for her friend's children, and feels almost ashamed of the general roughness of her own boys at home, whom she is much more ikely to find gliding down the banisters, sitting on the fence or playing ball than in poses which would gladden an artist's heart.

Of course the attitudes given above are only those for winter use. For summer an entirely different set prevail, but they are all quite as effective, and, indeed, they are the pride of Mrs. Burnett's heart.

What the result of this novel mode of education will be is a question which agitates many of the writer's friends, but they will soon have the opportunity of seeing, for a boy who can lean an elbow on the mantelpiece cannot be so very small.

On the elevated roads in New York it is no uncommon sight to see some great, powerful-looking man push aside a woman, just as she is about to seat herself in a vacated place, and calmly take the seat himself. Even women with babies in their arms do not, by any means, always have places given them in public conveyances. It is a noticeable fact in that city that the Irish laborer, tired with a hard day's work, is more likely to resign his seat to a woman than men of a seemingly better class.

In Mr. Friend's recently published book on flowers a number of superstitions still flourishing in England about flowers and plants are given. Some of these are quite amusing.

One of these is: "When rosemary flourishes, the lady rules." "If you move a bed of parsley something unfortunate is sure to happen." "If you bring a single daffodil into the house, you will have no luck with your ducklings."

Absurd these certainly seem, but are they any more so than a desire that most of us have to see the new moon in a certain way? The old superstition on this point demands that not only should the moon be seen over the right shoulder but that one should have one hand in the pocket, and, turning over the purse, wish that its contents may increase.

Lady Dufferin, the wife of the newly appointed Viceroy of India, is a woman universally popular. She was enthusiastically loved in Canada during her husband's administration there. Her manners are described as having a simplicity which is yet full of dignity. Her children too are charming.

Cannibals, says the London Spectator, "eat women with especial gusto." There seem to be very many cannibals just now living in our midst and, supposing the Spectator to be earnest, it certainly befits women to avoid long voyages of any kind as well as those of the Arctic regions. The case of the boy Parker, who was killed and eaten by the crew of the Mignonette, which has excited so many comments from the press, proves pretty conclusively that in such cases it is very apt to be the weakest member of the party who serves as refreshments for the rest. To eat a dead friend is a thought which fills one with horror, but the idea of saying a prayer over a live person before butchering and devouring them is too dreadful to think of.

An English gentleman was recently the possessor of a pigeon with a mania. It was a handsome pigeon with a gorgeous fan-tail and a most dignified pigeon, the head of a large family, but above all else it was a pigeon with a mania. Pygmalion fell in love with his marble statue, but Master Fantail became insanely enamored of a bottle. For men to have a decided weakness for the contents of similar vessels is not unusual, but this dignified pigeon never approached near enough to the bottle to find out that it was hollow even. He seemed to regard it with a loving reverence. It was a brown-stone ginger-beer bottle which the master found one day in front of his house, a fact that so irritated him that he threw it violently from him and it landed right under the pigeon coop. Scarcely had it touched the ground when the respected paterfamilias flew down from his house in the gable above the coach house, and strutting round and round the prostrate bottle, though never approaching it nearer than about nine inches, or a foot, he began to perform the most ludicrous series of genuflexions ever witnessed on the part of an enamored pigeon. He cooed and he bobbed, and in fact, made such a fool of himself that all who saw him were convulsed with laughter. This lasted for about an hour, when the bottle was removed. During the summer the same scene was gone through every time that particular bottle was placed in the yard. No other object, even when similar in size and general appearance, had the same effect. It was with that especial bottle that the bird had fallen in love, and to it he remained true to the end of his life.

An old gentleman died recently in Philadelphia, having nearly reached his one hundredth year, and among his papers was found an old diary over two hundred years old and which had been kept by his grandfather. The following extract from it shows how noble were many of the women who came to America with the early settlers: The picture presented of Philadelphia seems almost incredible in our days of mile after mile of substantial houses. "All that came wanted a dwelling and hastened to provide one. They lovingly helped each other. When the women set themselves to work they had not been used to, for few of our first settlers were of the laborious class. Help of that sort was very scarce, and my friend thought it expedient to help her husband at one end of the saw and to to fetch also such water to make mortar, as they had to build their chimney for their cave on the banks of the River Delaware, which was called the Crooked Billet Wharf at a later day. At one time, being overwearied therewith, her husband desired her to forbear saying, 'Thou, my dear, had better think of dinner,' on which poor woman she walked away, wept as she went reflecting on herself for coming to be exposed to such hardships, and then not know where to get a dinner, for their provision was all spent except a small quantity of biscuit and cheese, of which she had not informed her husband. She thought then she would try which of her friends had any to spare. Thus she walked on towards a tent (happy time when each one's treasure lay safe in their tent), but desponding in her mind, for she felt herself closely reproved and as if queried with, didst thou not come for liberty of conscience, and hast thou not got it? also been provided for beyond thy expectation, which so humbled her; she on her knees begged forgiveness, and for preservation in future and never repined after. When she arose from her knees and was going to seek for other food than what she had, her cat came into the tent with a fine large rabbit she had caught, which she thankfully received and dressed as an English hare. When her husband came to dinner, being informed of the particulars, they both wept with reverential joy and ate their meal, which was thus seasonably provided for them in singleness of heart. Many such divinely, providential cases did they partake of in their search, for liberty of conscience in the new world."

Plaisted skirts are even more popular than before this fall, as is shown by the London fashion papers. A very pretty skirt is made in box plaits, bordered near the bottom by a broad band of velvet. About three inches above this each plait is caught by a dainty ribbon bow.

At a recent fashionable English wedding the four little pages who attended the bride were dressed in knee breeches of plain blue satin with jackets trimmed with a profusion of valenciennes lace.

Bodices are much more trimmed now than for several years. Fichus of all styles are now much worn, especially when made of the material of the dress. A novel neck trimming is to have a hood-scarf edged with lace and with the ends sewed together, passed over the head and left to fall in soft folds in front.

A delusion exists in the minds of many Americans that the dresses of white muslin so popular during the summer months in England will retain their popularity this winter as evening dresses. This is a mistake; no one except very young girls wear them the winter evenings.

Jerseys are to be as much worn as usual this winter. Buttoned gloves are now more fashionable than the Mousquetaires, which have so long held the popular fancy. The only novelties much seen abroad in the latter shape have long wrists of real Spanish lace, exactly matching the color of the glove.

The little shoulder cape, either of the same material as the dress or of black lace and jet, is much worn this fall. Nothing is more becoming to most women.

Chicago boasts an undertaker, or as those gentlemen prefer to call themselves, "director of funerals," who has a thrifty wife by no means given to over sensitiveness. She is a German woman, and has a large family of small children, who clamber about on the caskets displayed in their father's shop. In the window of this there is a sign which informs the passers by in large, black letters on white cardboard held up by an elaborately finished coffin, that within may be had board by the day or week. The other day, in passing, the representative of the Post-Dispatch was attracted by the strong, and by no means fragrant odor of sauerkraut, and stepped to the open door to make sure that her eyes had not deceived her. They had not, for there, in the middle of the shop, was a large casket covered by an ordinary piece of ticking and supported on two wooden horses, and on it was spread a hearty meal, while all around it were seated the undertaker's numerous family, with three or four men, evidently boarders.

This reminds me that the undertakers have been holding a convention in Chicago, and in a speech made by one of them, he remarked that he had recently "had the pleasure of embalming several ladies." Could anything be more ghastly? Sextons of churches always say they prefer funerals to weddings—they are so much more popular.

A young man from St. Louis has been in Dakota for some weeks past, and had witnessed, among other interesting things, a ration day at a Cheyenne Indian Agency. In writing home he describes the whole affair in an entertaining fashion. This account of the behavior of the Indian squaws on that occasion takes away any lingering sympathy one may feel for the red women. The following is the extract referred to:

"There were being killed from five to ten steers at a time, when they were immediately quartered and dealt out to the party whose turn it happened to be. The women after giving their papooses a bone or some hair to serve as toys, disposed of their pets by seating them in a corner. Just as soon as a beef met its fate the entrails were thrown to one side, where a crowd of noisy squaws waited as impatient to pounce upon the disgusting things as a hawk upon its prey. She who happened to grab any lost no time in actually eating it just as it was, so afraid were they that some of their friends would attempt to take the dainty morsel away, as actually did happen several times. Frequently such a scene ended in a battle, when if one squaw was lucky enough to get more than the rest thought she ought to have, they would attack her on all sides, pulling her hair, scratching and digging their nails into her flesh until the blood flowed."

After the Indians have received their rations they throw whatever it may be, soap, axle-grease and food, all together in a pile on the ground, spreading over it blankets alive with vermin, and the result is that during the hot weather the stench is very soon perfectly intolerable.

The more one knows of the brave red man the more disgusting they seem.

It is not unusual abroad, and especially in England, for great actresses to marry great noblemen, but for a queen of the hippodrome to marry a Prince is uncommon enough to be decidedly interesting at any time. The Belgian papers recently published the announcement of the death at Boitsfort, near Brussels, of a foreign Prince who, since his settlement within the dominions of King Leopold II., has been known under the name of Baron de Reichenfels. The deceased, about whose identity there is no mystery was the hero, and according to some authorities, the victim of of a romantic attachment which a few years ago furnished materials for endless gossip in the Continental journals. Prince Henry XX. of Reuss—for such was the the real title of the deceased—became enamored, about four or five years since, of Mdlle. Clotilde Loisset, a charming and accomplished equestrienne, well-known by her public appearances in the hippodromes of the Continent. According to the rigid laws of Ebenburtigkeit and strict etiquette prevailing at the courts of Germany, a marriage with this lady would be an unpardonable mesalliance, involving on the part of the Prince the loss or relinquishment of most of the privileges of his rank and position. Prince Henry, however, had made up his mind to espouse the damsel. The morganatic union was concluded, and from that moment the bridegroom renounced his title as Prince and all the advantages of his rank, and until his death lived in retirement as simple Baron de Reichenfels in one of the suburbs of the Belgian capital.

Mrs. William Astor, the acknowledged leader of New York society, is the happy owner of a country-seat where almost unlimited numbers of flowers are grown, great hampers of which are sent thrice a week to the city house. The place is called Ferncliff, and is on the banks of the Hudson. There also is Mr. Astor's breeding establishment. Several large hot-houses are kept constantly in operation, and some sixty to seventy thousand plants are grown. Roses, of course, occupy a great deal of attention, and all the most fashionable varieties are produced in great profusion. The large golden yellow pearl des jardins is one of the most beautiful, and is usually sold in the city for as much as $2 a piece. Another favorite is the "Corueila Cook," the white rose so popular for bridal boquets, the yellow "Marechal Niel," the "Saffrano," of an indescribable shade of yellow, the white "Nephitis," the delicately shaded "Catherine Mermet," and many other hot-house beauties. Even in summer these cannot be raised except with artificial heat, and if they were hardy enough for that would doubtless immediately lose their fashionable prestige. If Mrs. Astor were not envied for any other reason she certainly would be for her almost unlimited supply of exquisite flowers.

Mrs. Pierre Lorillard enjoys a like immunity from florists' bills, and indeed so skillful is the gardener in charge of her green houses that he has introduced several new decorative plants into the notice of "society." Among the latest of these is a variety of asparagus imported from South Africa, and which is not only generally admitted by those favored few who have seen it to be more effective than the ordinary palm, and which is at the same time hardy enough, although, of course, an exotic, to stand the atmosphere of a ball-room. It has something of that charming feathery appearance of our usual garden asparagus gone to seed, and attains great heights.

"Do you know that brides very seldom lose their self-possession," remarked a popular clergyman the other day. "I have," he continued, "since my ordination united in the bonds of holy matrimony a great number of loving couples, but while I have never seen a man who was not overcome by nervousness, and who, at the very least, admitted feeling very weak in the knees, I have never seen a bride, who, to all outward appearances was not perfectly calm and self-possessed, as she stood up before the crowded church and glanced at her train to make sure that it fell in becoming folds. I have had all sorts of queer experiences in the matter of fees. Last fall I united a young couple, both of whom were prominent members of St. Louis society, the groom being, as well, very well provided with this world's goods. Just before starting off for the train after the reception, the young man came up to me and unobtrusively slipped an envelope into my hand. Later in the evening I handed it to my wife, who regards such fees as her especial property, and she opened it and pulled out a big old-fashioned penny, punched with several holes. They have just returned from their European tour and the happy husband sought me out the other day and begged that I would tell him what he had given me. It seems that he had put his old "lucky piece" into the envelope instead of the twenty dollar gold piece he had intended.

Picnic teas are a new form of entertainment which have become very popular in England, the fashion having been set by the Royal family, and, like every other English fashion, will probably not be long in reaching this country. They have a great advantage over the old fashioned picnic with its tiresome preparations for an elaborate lunch, which so often ended in disappointment caused by bad weather. Picnic teas are much more informal things and can only be enjoyed to the full by people living in the country. The informal little notes are sent around to a few pleasant neighbors and the afternoon drive terminates at some picturesque spot where tea is served.

The few Paris hats that have as yet made their appearance in this country this season are somewhat eccentric in style by reason of their great height, their pointed fronts, the brim being pinched to a peak above the forehead, and further accentuated by the trimmings, their narrow sides and scooped out corners, the last being contrived to make room for the back hair. Velvet is to be, as usual, the material for dress bonnets and felt and cloth for wearing with woolen costumes. There are several varieties of velvet, plain, frise, beaded and embossed, but the special novelty is velvet embroidered in small sprays, leaves, etc., and often worked by hand. Shapes are covered in irregular and informal ways, as in loose folds or puffs, or gathers, and in some cases the velvet is tacked at irregular intervals, and an embroidered figure is thrown into relief in the tacking. When smooth velvet crowns are used they are well-nigh covered with pendant jet or gilt beads, or else embroidered with gilt thread.

The newest felt bonnets have embroidered bands on the brim, and flowers on the crown worked in the color of the felt relieved by a little gilt.

A new worsted lace is used in millinery, and is in all the new colors as well as in black and white, with an occasional gold thread. This lace, made into rosettes, in the centers of which little birds of brilliant plumage nestle, forms the trimming for the tops of many bonnets.

Among the prettiest hats are the velvet ores with high crowns, trimmed with white crepe de chine, embroidered in gold.

The greatest variety of jaunty little caps for both ladies and children have made their appearance in London this fall, and show every symptom of becoming very popular. To most faces they are exceedingly becoming.

The Vanderbilts seem to have quite a craze for the dark, if one may judge by the usual condition of their palatial homes in New York, where a sombre twilight usually prevails. In the house of both W. H. and W. K. Vanderbilt, not only the drawing-rooms but the halls are so dark that any stranger going in from the bright sunlight cannot possibly see see where they are stepping. The entrance hall of W. K. Vanderbilt's house, corner of Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue, is a perfect marvel of richness and beauty. The walls are handsomely decorated, the marble floor is covered with costly rugs from Eastern looms, representing years of labor and over which are scattered great vases holding rare exotics in bloom, with here and there a chain of elaborately carved wood in antique form, and on one side is a great open fireplace. But the light which filters through the door of heavy-stained glass is not enough to light up all this, so that it is necessary to keep the chandelier at the foot of the white marble stairway constantly illuminated in order to see there at all. The parlors are kept in a similar condition.

Perhaps, if there be any truth in the much-talked-of Mandeville scandal, Mrs. Vanderbilt finds the dim light in better accord with her spirits than anything more cheerful.

So many women are graduating as physicians every year now both in this country and in England that it really seems as though we should be overrun with them. A St. Louis doctor has lately induced both his daughter and niece to enter the medical college, declaring that many women starting into it with no more taste for medicine than they have made excellent physicians.

It was the good doctor's niece who came home the other day when the family were at lunch and as she threw aside her hat exclaimed "Oh mamma, I am really in love with chemistry." A servant very lately imported from the Emerald Isle, was waiting on the table. She dropped the dish she held, and with upraised hands exclaimed, "Oh, begorra! If ye'r in love with Mr. Chemistry sure we will be havin' a weddin' in the family."

Ladies will be interested to know that whalebone never was as expensive as at present, having now reached the very high figure of $11,000 per ton. At one time there was so little demand for bone that it was disregarded by the whalers, and scarcely afforded ship room. It stands to reason that dresses and corsets must now be much stiffer than they have been before in several years.

RATES RESTORED.

East-Bound Freight Schedule Being Adhered to—Coal Road Meeting.

The freight representatives of East-bound roads were kicking loudly yesterday because they received orders to adhere to the tariff rate of twenty-nine cents on grain to New York. They appealed to Joint Agent De Pew to know why it was that while Chicago roads were charging but fifteen cents, St. Louis lines should be compelled to charge twenty-nine cents for the same class of freight. The joint agent proceeded immediately to read them the following telegram received last evening from Albert Fink, chairman of the Joint Committee:

"New York, October 2, 1884.—H. S. De Pew, St. Louis—Pending difficulties at Chicago satisfactorily settled. Tariff to be maintained fully, commencing to-morrow. Notify all parties and issue necessary instructions for maintenance of rates."

Later in the day rates were restored, and every one appeared satisfied, for the time being at least.

Yesterday afternoon another meeting of the representatives of the coal roads was held at the office of George W. Parker, general manager of the Cairo Short Line. All roads were represented and a pretty stormy meeting was had. Mr. Parker refused to be interviewed concerning the meeting and would only admit that a meeting had been held to talk the situation over. From another source it was learned that the real cause for calling the meeting was to try to patch up the coal pool, but that after a very stormy and inharmonious meeting the officials retired without reaching any conclusion further than to let matters alone until a more propitious time.

The Amusement of Cabinet Officers Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Vice-President Breckenridge and Secretary Floyd Principals in a Cocking Main—Deserved Popularity With all the Presidents of the Soldiers' Home—President Arthur's Return to Washington—Approaching Matrimonial Events—Society Notes.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

Washington, October 3.—The principal feature in the social world this week is the preparation for the return of the President and his sojourn at the Soldiers' Home cottage, which has been put in order awaiting his arrival. His daughter, who has preceded him, is at the White House just now, as is also Mr. Alan Arthur, but will go to the Cottage when he arrives and takes possession. The Soldiers' Home and its surroundings, which are especially delightful in summer, are also agreeable in the later seasons, and seem to be especially so to the President. He finds great satisfaction in this quiet home, where he can work or play at pleasure, without the annoyance of many callers. If he wants to have a long political or business chat with a friend he has but to send for him to come to the Cottage and he is safe from interruption. If he wants to entertain a party of friends in a quiet, home-like manner, he is able to do so there, and with a freedom from some of the annoyances which are incident to the White House entertainments. If he wants absolute quiet so that he may wrestle with his message, he has it there. If he desires to bury himself in the bosom of his family, freed from all annoyances of public service and public life, the Cottage offers this opportunity. His sister, Mrs. McElroy, is to come soon, and the "family" will, it is expected, take up its residence at the "Cottage," to remain until the winter winds have rendered the country unattractive, and the great rooms of the White House and the entertainments necessary to the society season call them in. President Arthur usually lingers at the Home pretty late, especially enjoying the quiet which it offers for uninterrupted work upon his message. The "Home" and its cottage have been for Presidents for a quarter of a century or more. A Washington correspondent of the New York World of July, 1860, says: "Punctually at 4 o'clock the President's carriage rolls through the semi-circle roadway of the Executive Mansion, en route for the Soldiers' Home. No scarlet outriders precede it save the handsome English coach dogs presented to Mr. Buchanan in England. A pleasant drive of thirty minutes and the President is seated at his evening repast. After that is finished, he takes his Havana, and, stretched out on the lawn, sees visions in the curling smoke of the Presidential succession. At 9 p. m. he retires, and follows this routine by an early rise the next morning, and, when the hands of the clock point to that hour, ante-meridian, he is at his desk in the White House. In this quiet, unostentatious way our presidents shake the dust from their shoes and fly from the sweltering sun of the Capitol at midsummer. Her Majesty has a castle of her own, situate in the north of England, from which the British ensign usually floats in August or September; the French Emperor, I believe, when not too deeply engaged in the affairs of State, hies him away to Fontainebleau, while our Republican President simply takes up his abode when Sirus rules the sky amid the umbrageous trees of the "Old Soldiers' Home," overlooking Washington and commanding a view of the beautiful Potomac down as far Mount Vernon. For natural scenery it is equaled by none of the surroundings of Washington and is a fit place for strengthening the mental and animal energies and combines the attractions of city and country.

This was in the days when presidents did not consider it proper that they should leave the seat of Government, even if the weather did grow a trifle warm. It would seem that the cabinet officers even of that time, however, were given to slipping away and leaving their chief to do the work, for the same correspondent writes: "Attorney-General Black will leave the city to-morrow for Pennsylvania. Secretaries Floyd and Thompson contemplate proceeding to Old Point on Thursday, intending to stay several weeks. Mr. Cass also being absent, there will be only three cabinet officers in the city, Messrs Toucey, Holt and Cobb. The President has, during the absence of Secretary Cass, repeatedly been at the State Department, personally attending to weighty matters pertaining to foreign affairs."

OLD TIME AMUSEMENTS.

Lest it be supposed that there was a lack of amusements in that period, or that the distinguished statesmen here gathered suffered from ennui, it is well enough to extend the quotations a trifle further. The Baltimore American, of about the same date says: "Great men, like small men, need relaxation of body and mind. But great men differ in their views of relaxation. Napoleon amused himself by smearing molasses over his son's face; Cæsar gave big dinners and dressed like a dandy; Alexander the Great drank to excess; Fox gambled like a madman; Burke wrote furious books against the French Revolutionists; General Jackson indulged himself in race-horses; Chief Justice Marshall pitched quoits; President Buchanan asks people if they have been to the Smithsonian Institute; Judge Black writes articles against Judge Douglass; Secretary Toucey is playful over lumps of coal and bits of live oak; it is not known what Mr. Cass does to amuse himself, nor do we get anything on this point concerning the General Postmaster; we have something very fresh, however, touching the pastimes of the immaculate Floyd and the Vice President: A reliable sporting journal informs us that a certain class of the Washington populace takes a great deal of interest in that is to take place on the 10th inst. The stakes are $500 and $1,000. The combatants on this occasion will be no other than Gen. Concha, a red cock of the Spanish breed belonging to the Hon. John B. Floyd, Secretary of War, and Gen. Ortegal, a Spanish cock belonging to Hon. John C. Breckenridge, Vice President. It is believed, adds the trustworthy sporting paper, that this cock fight will draw the largest concourse of ladies and gentlemen that ever assisted in a pastime of this sort in the United States."

MATRIMONIAL.

The flood of matrimonial announcements continues. The formal announcement of the engagement of Lieut. Everett of the Navy to Miss Hackett of Portsmouth is just given to the public. The wedding is to be a "full dress" event. The approaching marriage of a daughter of Congressman Ranney of Boston to Mr. Allen of that city is announced. The engagement of Miss Charlotte Lansdale of this city to Mr. Lober of Philadelphia is announced, with the additional information that the marriage will take place in October, at St. John's church. Dr. C. A. Siegfried, of the navy, was married on Wednesday of this week at Peoria, Ill., to Miss Ida Farrell, who spent several winters here as a guest of Col. Ingersoll's family. The marriage of Dr. Pritchard of this city to Miss Leila Dutton is set for October 8.

NOTES.

Mrs. Clemmer, the mother of the late Mary Clemmer Hudson, is at the residence of Mr. Hudson here, and is, it is announced, to remain during the winter.

Major and Mrs. Goodloe have returned to their country place, near Washington, and are expecting Senator and Mrs. Beck, Mrs. Goodloe's parents, soon, as they were when last heard from on their way home from Wyoming, where they had been visiting their son, who resides there.

A local paper, commenting on the failure of the Newcomb-Buchanan firm in Louisville lately, says: "Miss Buchanan was in Washington in the winter of 1880-81, with the family of Senator Williams of Kentucky. Her costly toilets that winter were so numerous and magnificent as to attract attention. She brought over twenty elegant new dresses with her from Louisville and yet, promptly on her arrival, bought others from New York modistes then in the city, and spent $1,000 for rare laces at a store on Pennsylvania avenue."

A society paper here announces that "There seems to be much apprehension on the part of the younger members of society lest this season shall witness a greater dearth of beaux than has been the case for many years past. So large a number of young men have entered upon a business life in distant cities that, even at large entertainments, the proper proportion of partners will be difficult to obtain. In addition to this much regret is felt at the departure of various naval and army officers stationed here last winter."

Setting Aside a Settlement.

Charles H. Ivers and others as heirs of the estate of Olly Williams, deceased, filed a bill in equity yesterday to set aside the final settlement of W. C. Jamison, executor of the estate. Allegations of fraud and misappropriation of funds passing through Jamison's hands are the main causes set forth in the bill asking that the settlement be set aside. About $15,000 are involved.

Cuticura

A POSITIVE CURE

For Every Form of Skin and Blood Disease, From Pimples to Scrofula.

I have had the Psoriasis for nine months. About five months ago I applied to a doctor near Boston, who helped me, but unfortunately I had to leave, but continued taking his medicine for nearly three months, but the disease did not leave. I saw Mr. Carpenter's letter in the Philadelphia Record, and his case perfectly described mine. I tried the Cuticura Remedies, using two bottles Resolvent, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap in proportion, and call myself completely cured.

THE FAIR.

Preparations Completed for Next Week's Display.

Eighty-Three Acres Filled With Attractive Exhibits.

New Features Which Will be Added This Year—The Various Departments—Premiums and Entries—A Ramble Through the Grounds.

To-morrow the gates of the Fair Grounds will be thrown open to the public as a sort of introductory to the twenty-fourth annual exposition of the St. Louis Mechanical and Agricultural Association. Monday is the inaugural day of the season, but of late years it has been customary to admit the public to the grounds and buildings containing the exhibits on Sunday. This innovation has become popular, affording, as it does, an opportunity to thousands of citizens and strangers, too, who may not have time during the week to visit the Fair and take advantage of the reduced price of admission. Heretofore this off-day, if such it may be termed, has not been entirely satisfactory to the visitors on account of the incomplete condition of the displays. Such, however, will not be the case this year, and the indications are that everything will be ready. Certainly no efforts, time or expense have been spared by the exhibitors, as the advanced condition or affairs as early as yesterday disclosed. Not a moment has been lost during the past three weeks, and in every department, whether in the buildings or in the fields, a small army of workmen have been busy from morning till night, with hammer, saw and paint brush. The expectations of the most sanguine cannot fail to be realized. The management of the Fair has been specially energetic, and the active policy, liberal in ideas and with money, has served in the past few years, and more so for the present occasion, to extend the scope of the display. If the result of past experience, judiciously employed, unremitting labor and lavish expenditure of money, indicate anything, then this year's exhibition will certainly prove to be the greatest in the history of the association. To-day the St. Louis Fair needs no lavish praise, for its fame extends throughout the world and it stands without a rival. This assertion, it is safe to predict, will be fully verified next week. Never before has so much interest been aroused, not only at home, but also abroad, and no doubt remains that the attendance will be very large. Of course, the splendid success anticipated, in point of attendance, will be contingent upon the state of the weather, and at present the prospects are that it will be favorable. The Fair has been thoroughly and extensively advertised at every accessible point within a radius of five hundred miles of St. Louis, in all directions, and arrangements have been made with all the railroads and steamboat lines to convey passengers and freight to and from the Fair at greatly reduced rates, enabling people, even at a great distance, to visit St. Louis at a comparatively small expense. In fact the fullest attention has been given to even the smallest details, and nothing overlooked that may serve to induce the citizens of the neighboring States to attend.

THE AMOUNT OF PREMIUMS

offered is the largest of any similar exhibition anywhere in the world, and the list of entries comprises a greater number and variety of articles than any other. This year's premium list is more extensive than ever before and shows that many and important additions have been made to nearly all the departments. There is one feature which heretofore has been regarded by the farmers as the principal attraction for them, which has been omitted. That is the cattle exhibit. The reasons, however, are well known, the board of directors having deemed it prudent to exclude the cattle display, because of the disease now ravaging thousands of the animals. None regret the imperative necessity that occasioned such action. The new and increased attractions in the other live stock departments will more than counterbalance the absence of that feature. The horse department will be especially fine, the entries being greater than last year and there being a larger number of good premiums. Special attention has been given to the ring performances and exhibitions in the amphitheater, and splendid programmes arranged for each of the six days. Besides the premium money and ribbon, the directors of the Fair will issue a neatly printed certificate, naming the successful exhibitor, his residence, name of the animal, and the class in which the premium has been obtained.

A VISIT TO THE GROUNDS.

A Post-Dispatch reporter who visited the grounds to-day found everything in splendid order. Among the outdoor displays, the finest will be the agricultural. Fifteen acres are already covered with splendidly arranged exhibits, and thirty acres more have been added, which will make it the largest and most extensive of the kind ever before witnessed at any Fair. There are more entries than at any of the previous exhibitions, many of the new exhibitors being the foremost manufacturers of agricultural implements in the country. Every machine in the exhibit will be in full operation every day.

The Swine Department will be an unusually fine one. More entries have been made than ever before, and a large number of finest breeds are already in the pens. The Sheep Department will be no less attractive, there being an increase in the number of flocks entered for exhibition and competition. A lively competition for premiums is expected. Every breed is comprised in the list of entries for the poultry show, and some of the finest game chickens will be on exhibition. In this department are also included fine displays of pigeons, rabbits, swans, pheasants, white pea and guinea fowls, English ferrets, etc. The pens, stables and sheds have been repaired and are cleaned and are in excellent condition.

The large machinery hall will be found particularly attractive this year by reason of new exhibits of the latest and finest inventions and improvements. Work in this department has been pushed forward rapidly. The display will be as complete as it is possible to make it. Many of the exhibitors have changed the arrangement of their exhibits so as to display them to the best possible advantage and at the same time insuring absolute safety to visitors against any danger. Almost every article of machinery in the main building, as well as that in the outdoor space and adjoining annex, will be in full operation every day. Among the novelties that will be exhibited for the first time are an ice-making machine and an evaporator. Several new classes have been added this year to the machinery department, and new features incorporated that will serve to increase the great interest always manifested in this department.

Mechanical Hall will be literally filled with an extensive and varied display of every conceivable specimen of workmanship, machine and handmade. Every particle of space has been taken up, and although a glance at the list of entries would seem to indicate that there is no room left, yet, the exhibits have been so well and carefully arranged that they will not only be advantageously displayed but will permit of the utmost freedom of movement on the part of visitors. There have been some admirable changes in the make up of the greater portion of the exhibits, so that many of them become old and uninteresting will appear new and attractive to the [illegible] time visitors. This evening everything in the Mechanical department will be in complete order. Here, as in the machinery department, there are several new classes and larger premiums. The commodious shed which is part of [illegible] department, and adjoins, will be [illegible] for the vehicle display. Every inch of space has been taken up and the exhibit of vehicles of every description will be finer and more extensive than ever. Nearly all the best known manufacturers have made entries. As usual, there are no premiums for carriages. This rule has been adopted by the directors at the unanimous request of the carriage manufacturers of the city.

For the feminine portion of the crowds that will visit the Fair during the week there is no department that will prove more attractive and interesting than the one in which are the dry goods, textile and carpet displays. The exhibitors seem to have aroused themselves this year and resorted to the greatest ingenuity in the arrangement of their displays. Good taste, skill and artistic knowledge have been developed to the utmost degree, and are manifested in the general arrangement of the articles exhibited. The ladies evince more interest in this department than ever before, and a greater number than last year have made entries. For crazy quilts alone there are nearly twenty entries, and the competition between the fair ones promises to be quite spirited. The frame structure which forms part of this department, will contain the major portion of the exhibits, as part of the main or brick building, has been appropriated [for] an entirely new and magnificent feature which will make the building a favorite resort for ladies and children. In the north end has been constructed an artificial grotto, with waterfalls, discharging more than a thousand gallons of water per minute. The exterior of the grotto is splendidly decorated with flowers and running plants, while within, tastefully arranged in the green sod, will be variegated-hued minerals, the whole to be beautifully illuminated, presenting a perfect scene of splendor and enchantment.

In the old Art Hall, no longer devoted to that purpose, will be the geological, chemical and mineral departments. The displays, already in place, comprise some of the finest and rarest specimens that could be secured, private collections of great value and contributions. In size and quality many of the displays cannot be equaled. Special attention has been paid to the collection of insects, taxidermic specimens and curiosities, and these will prove a perfect museum. The arrangement is systematic and artistic, and will interest all who visit the beautiful hall.

The department in which are displayed produce, jellies, bread and cake exhibits, is complete in every respect, the displays having been

and with a view to invite the closest scrutiny. Certainly none will be found more attractive, for many exhibitors have surpassed all previous efforts. Everything pertaining to this department will, as a matter of course, prove instructive and interesting to the ladies, but there is no doubt that the lively competition among the fair ones for the premiums for the cake, bread and jelly entries will be most active and therefore very interesting to all.

THE DAIRY AND CREAMERY DISPLAY

is one of the finest ever made, and comprises every article pertaining to the dairy and creamery interests. The exhibit is in a large hall specially erected for the purpose and for the exclusive use of the department. The list of premiums has started an active competition among the exhibitors, and the result is that only the best articles have been entered.

The department of flowers, fruits, vegetables, wines and beer is not the least attractive and the entries made indicate a lively interest on the part of exhibitors. Every display is a very complete one [and] artistically arranged. Aside from the extent and [var]iety of the exhibits the department will [be] rendered more attractive than heretofore by the general arrangement of the hall, which has been beautified almost beyond description. The leading florists of the city have decorated the interior of the building with evergreens and filled all the unoccupied space with beautiful plants, all arranged in the florist's most skillful manner. Along the walls are running plants, and from the ceiling are pendant over 200 hanging baskets, filled with fragrant flowers. The number of exhibits is greater than at any of the preceding fairs. Floral Hall, for it will be so designated, will fairly rival the magnificent Textile Hall with its beautiful grotto.

will hold a royal levee next week, judging by the elaborate arrangements in that department. Some of the finest specimens of this year's cotton has been placed on exhibit, and the growers appear to have entered into a determined contest for the supremacy. Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee, Texas, Mississippi and the Indian Territory are the competitors, and cotton men will watch with interest the competition between the rival exhibits.

The wool department possesses unusual interest and attractiveness. The competition is limited to four States—Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, and Kansas. Some of the samples of fleece exhibited surpass anything of the kind ever entered and show excellent qualities, embracing beauty, elasticity of fibre, length and strength and brightness. The clothing and combing wools are equally fine. The arrangements in this department are simply perfect, and will insure a great deal of attention on the part of visitors.

Aside from the various departments described, there will be a good deal to interest the visitors in the permanent attractions of the Fair Grounds. During the past summer have been made. All the buildings have been thoroughly repaired, painted and some of them enlarged to meet the increase of exhibits. The grounds have been beautified and greatly improved, and were never in so splendid condition as to-day. The lawns and trees look handsome, and the roadways clean and elegant. The zoological gardens, which form no small part of the many attractions, possesses new and rare additions. Some changes have been made that will prove an agreeable surprise to those who have not visited the Fair since last fall. The tall passenger elevator, near the secretary's office, which was the delight of the children, was considered unsafe, and has been removed. It will be a source of disappointment to the little ones, but the removal of the huge structure has greatly enhanced the attractiveness of that portion of the grounds.

The outlook for an auspicious opening of the Twenty-fourth Annual Fair, is very promising, and few, if any, will fail to visit it. There are additional facilities for reaching the grounds, made since the last Fair, and plenty of accommodations. All the booths are occupied and will dispense refreshments of all sorts to the visitors. A force of ticket sellers and gatekeepers, numbering fifty men, will be on duty daily, consequently there will be no delay on account of the crowds in gaining admission.

THE SUPERINTENDENTS

of the various departments have been appointed and have already entered upon their duties. They are as follows: Mechanical Department—Col. J. G. Chapman and Wm. H. O'Brien. Machinery—Wm. H. Stone. Agricultural Implements—Thos. Keilley. Textile—Chas. H. Anderson and J. N. Tregerthan. Dairy and Creamery—Capt. J. M. Douglas. Geological, Mineral and Chemical—Prof. Hambach, of Washington University. Vegetable and Fruit—David Hooton. Sheep—Col. Clay Taylor. Swine—Capt. James McKinney of St. Charles, Mo. MARRIED A SECOND TIME.

The Remarkable Experience of Two Old-Time Plantation Darkies.

A couple strolled into the Recorder's office to-day to obtain a marriage license. Both were colored and looked as though they might have passed through the mill before.

"What is your name?" asked the clerk of the man.

"Noah Emmerson, sah!"

"Ever been married before?"

"Yes, sah!"

"Your wife living?"

"Yes, sah!"

"Did you get a divorce?"

"Doant know wat dat is, sah!"

"Where is your wife?"

"Dere she stands, sah."

"I mean your other wife; you haven't married her yet."

"Yes, I have, boss; dat's my wife—never had any udder."

"Don't be so stupid, Noah," chimed in the old lady: "tell 'im all about it."

"Wall, you see, boss, we's bin'married a long time, but I'se jist foun' out we got married under de wrong name. Jist when de war was done an' I was sot free, I didn't know my name, so Caroline and me got married and I ca ed myself Jackson, after my old boss's name. I jist 'scovered de udder day from a pusson what knowd me, my name war Noah Emmerson, an' I want to git dematter straight."

"What's your name?" asked the clerk of the old lady.

"Caroline Jackson."

"But what was your other name?"

"Never had any, sah, 'cept Caroline till I married Noah."

After consulting Mr. Farrelly the clerk gave them a license, and they went off apparently happy, to enter upon a second honeymoon.

Hoisted by an Explosion.

While Julius Niess was sitting on an old whisky barrel in front of his father's saloon, No. 1228 South Seventh street, yesterday, some one dropped a match into the bung. An explosion followed, which threw the boy eight feet into the air and burned him seriously about the face and hands.

To Consumptives.—Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime has now been before the public twenty years, and has steadily grown in favor and appreciation. This could not be the case unless the preparation was of high intrinsic value. The combination of the Phosphate of Lime with pure Cod-Liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilbor, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. FINE ART.

The Early History of the Celebrated Painter, Munkacsy.

Autumn Exhibitions—New Pictures in New York—Mr. Meeker's Summering and its Results—The Sketch Clubs—News in the Local Studios.

The announcement that the celebrated Munkacsy, considered by many to be the greatest painter of the age, had lost his reason, has arounsed a great interest in his life among the art-lovers of this country. The most readable description of his life ever printed in an American journal was published in the New York World last week, and from the interesting account there given the following concerning the early history of this remarkable man is taken: "On the northeast boundaries of Hungary," says the writer, Mr. N. Thornu, "in the County of Bereg, is a small town of 8,000 to 9,000 inhabitants named Munkacs. The town surrounds on three sides the famous fort of Munkacs, which is erected on the summit of a rocky promontory, and served for a long time as a prison for political forfeiters. Alexander Ypsilanti was detained there a number of years. During the revolutionary movement in 1848 the Hungarian rebels succeeded in investing the fort and expelling the Austrian garrison. In the morning following one of the rencontres between the regular troops and the rebels in the streets of Munkacs, early passers-by found among the dead and wounded men a crying child, a baby boy, who could not give any information concerning his origin and whom no one was able to identify.

THE DESERTED CHILD.

The child was brought to a public institution, christened on the day of St. Michael, and called Michael Munkacsy because he had been found in the streets of the town. After the boy left school he was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker through the care of the municipality, but the planing bench and the chisel had little attraction for him, and all his moments of leisure, as well as the time he could steal from work, he spent in drawing, being his own teacher. By and by his master complained to the town authorities of the laziness of his apprentice, "who did not work, but lost his time in soiling paper with all sorts of curious figures and portraits." A wealthy citizen hearing of the fact, went one day to the shop and asked the blushing boy to show him his sketches. The consequence was that young Michael was taken away from the cabinet-maker and sent to a professional school, where he acquired, besides the principles of drawing, the elementary knowledge of languages and science. In due time the same gentleman enabled him to frequent the Academy of Dusseldorf, where he became, under the direction of Profs. Knaus and Vautier, the great artist who has held since 1867 the lead in the Salon of Paris."

Mr. Thomas concludes his narrative as follows: "The fatal blow of destiny that stopped Munkacsy in his brilliant career, regretted by all his friends and acquaintances, is a mortal wound to the heart of his wife, who lived for him and his glory. But not all hope is lost. The retirement in which he is living and resting from the overwork of the last years will quiet his nerves and lead back to their normal orbit the mental faculties and the glorious imagination of the author of "Christ before Pilate" and "Christ on Calvary."

AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS.

The Autumn Exhibitions with their opening and closing dates are as follows: Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, fifty-fifth annual exhibition, October 30 to December 11, works received October 6-11; Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York, winter loan exhibition, opens about November 15, and continues until April; Portland Art Society, Portland, Me., semi-annual exhibition, November 1-15; National Academy of Design, autumn exhibition, November 3-29, works received October 15-18; Autumn Exhibition American Art Association to inaugurate new galleries, American pictures from Paris Salon, November 10, works received October 6-13; Philadelphia Society of Artists, November 17, December 13, Annual Exhibition Salmagundi Sketch Club at National Academy of Design, New York, December 10-23.

NEW PICTURES IN NEW YORK.

Among the new canvases now on exhibition at Knoedler & Co.'s galleries in New York are said to be a fine Troyon, an unusual motive, two hounds straining in the leash, perfect in drawing and execution; a good Henner; a glowing little Bridgman, "Market Day—Cairo;" a dainty Firmin-Girard, "The Rendezvous," with the atmosphere and foliage of an American autumn; a strong canvas by W. Sadler, "Past and Present," monks sewing garments by hand and machine, and an Escosura, characteristic and a good example. "The Little Stranger," by Robert Wylie, jr., a story of Brittany peasant life, is noticeable, as is also a strong Palmaroli. Heilbuth's large canvas "Drifting," has delicious atmosphere and coloring. Jules Breton's "Noon-Time" tells with his usual force of the "poetry of toil." Boughton is well and charmingly represented in his latest canvas of "Katrina Van Tassel," and L. Jiminez's "Comforting the Afflicted" is as well conceived and executed as is usual with this powerful painter. There are also in the galleries a large and fine Daubigny "Evening on the Oise," and an exceptionally strong Diaz, with a truly wonderful sky and atmosphere, recalling Vandervide.

DUPRE'S CATTLE PIECE.

Dupre's great cattle piece has been so universally admired that the visitors to the Exposition owe a special vote of thanks to the gentleman who kindly lent it for exhibition. It is from the well-known establishment of Wm. Schaus of New York. Mr. Schaus is at present in Germany, and during his absence his nephew, Mr. Henry Schaus, runs the shop. Mr. Herman Schaus is well known and popular in St. Louis, and he has every reason to think well of this city, as it was here that he married a few years ago one of the brightest ornaments of St. Louis' society. When the Exposition committee called on him he took down from his walls some $14,000 worth of fine pictures and sent them out without a hint or suggestion of selling one of them. He is one of those gentlemen who are content to do the right thing under all circumstances, and to let the consequences take care of themselves. It would be an eminently proper thing if the consequence of his ready courtesy should be to have some public-spirited millionaire buy the Dupre to be kept as a public art treasure in St. Louis forever.

LOCAL ART CIRCLES

have been very dull the past week. Mr. Meeker has returned from his Minnesota summering, and as a result of his work up north a number of fine outdoor studies of nature adorn the walls of his studio. He has some very pleasant sketches of the lakes and waterfalls about Lake Minnetonka, which he will elaborate during the coming winter. Mr. Meeker had a class of twelve St. Louis ladies studying with him in the delightful Northern summer retreats, and this class was supplemented by a still larger one made up of Minneapolis and St. Louis students. The Minneapolis Evening Journal of last Saturday devotes a column to Mr. Meeker and his methods, all of which is very complimentary. He is now preparing for his winter class, which will be brought together just after the St. Louis autumnal festivities have closed.

The Salmagundi Club meets on the 15th inst. It will be Ernst Albert's night. The subject for illustration is "Beauties of Nature." Mr. Albert has not yet issued his invitations.

The Art School display at the Exposition has not come in for the notice it deserves, probably because of its having been placed on an out-of-the-way wall. It is a very creditable display, however, and should be inspected by all friends of the school. The drawings and studies are hung to the right of the east entrance of the art halls. The Art School will be opened next week. All the teachers are here with the exception of Mr. Fry, who is now on his way from Europe.

"Jim" Barnsley received an honorable mention in a picture exhibited at Versailles recently. Barnsley is coming to the front.

The Students' Sketch Club had a reception last night, the first this season, at the residence of Mr. W. R. Hodges, the well known art critic. Frank Gates, the scenic artist at Pope's Theater, was the host, and the subject illustrated was "Sketches from Bret Harte." A number of fine sketches were hung up, and a great deal of finer lunch was disposed of. The Students' Club has a bright outlook.

A great many good stories are told on people who comment on Chambers' picture at the Exposition. A couple of grangers examined it the other day, and the elder of the two remarked: "Great Scott, but that's an old picture!—two or three thousand years old, I guess. Just look at the frame!" Another couple concluded the picture represented some epoch in the history of Texas; "for see," said one of them, "thar's a lone star up thar on the frame."

It is said that at the next meeting of the Salmagundi Club the secretary will make an effort to have the expelled member reinstated.

Ed Huppert is painting a picture of a bend in the river at Carondelet, with a lot of darkies playing on the shore. It will be placed on exhibition next week.

W. H. Howe, the cattle painter, has made a great many friends by his gentlemanly deportment at the Exposition art halls. He has charge of the pictures there, and will sell to any one wishing to buy.

As predicted in this column last Saturday, the portrait drawn by Miss Mary Fairchild was the best of the series of American beauties yet seen. Miss Fairchild has talent of a pronounced order.

Mr. Spurgin is said to be doing some fine pictorial work.

Only One Short Left.

Only one short now holds out on the September corn deal that culminated at 65c in this market. This is Captain Thomas, through his brokers, Hubbard & Bertlett, and the amount in dispute is only 10,000 bushels. The case will be arbitrated through a special committee, consisting of M. McEnnis, F. B. Chamberlain and T. W. Carter. Mr. Carter will act as chairman. The longs will ask for 65c as the settling price, with 10 per cent. damages added. If this is awarded them it will bring the price up to 71½c. The case will be proceeded with as soon as the parties are ready.

THE GRAND PARADE.

It is to Occur the Night Following the Veiled Prophets' Entrance.

An Opportunity to See the St. Louis Militia at Their Best—The Old Warrior's Prompt Actions—The Lieutenant's Little Scheme—The Tredways—Military Balls—Detail for Next Week.

(General Orders No. 7.)
HEADQUARTERS FIRST REGIMENT N. G. OF MISSOURI, ST. LOUIS, October 2, 1884.

1. The companies of this command will assemble at the Armory Wednesday, October 8th, at 8 o'clock p. m., for parade through the illuminated portion of the city.

2. The assembly will be sounded at 8:20; adjutant call at 8:30 p. m. By order of

E. D. MEIER,
Colonel Commanding.

A. L. SHAPLEIGH, Capt. and Adjt.

As will be seen from the above general orders, the parade is to take place. All the preliminaries have been gone through with, the slight expense of the affair has been guaranteed, and nothing remains to be done but to have the companies prepared and turned out. This will indeed be gratifying news to all interested in military matters. The new First Regiment has never yet been seen in public to advantage, and it is years since so large a body trod the streets of St. Louis. The parade is to be given Wednesday night, when the Mexican Veterans are also to turn out, the First Regiment escorting them and taking the right of the line. The line of march has not yet been settled, but it is safe to say that it will be only along the illuminated streets. The crowds will be great that night and the streets will be filled with people, but every precaution will be taken to have the streets cleared from curb to curb, so that the companies can march in platoons and perform a greater number of evolutions than they could in a more limited space. The criticism of the public will be invited to the bearing and skill of the soldiers, not to their appearance, as in the matter of uniforms the regiment is anything but gorgeous.

THE OLD WARRIOR.

General Sherman, has once more endeared himself to the militia by the display of that quick action and prompt intuition which is characteristic of him. Col. Meier called on the General a few evenings ago and found him deep in a mass of literary matter. Letters and letter bookf were strewn about the General's room and writing material and paper showed that the leader of the march to the sea was elbow deep in epistolary work. "Well, what's the matter now?" he asked Col. Meier as the latter greeted him. "Any row in the regiment? Anything up?" "No," said the Colonel, "nothing at all. I just wanted to tell you that we need a little money—not a great deal—and while we are aware of the wisdom of waiting we nevertheless feel that it is best to inform the citizens' committee that there are a great many little things that need immediate attention." "Why, certainly," said the General, "I'll have a meeting called at once. This thing must be attended to. I leave the city Sunday night and we'll have a meeting of the committee before that time." That was all. Col. Meier learned later from Mr. Cupples that a meeting of the committee had been called by the General and would be held this evening. The meeting will no doubt result in the collection of a sufficient amount of money to enable the companies to pay off any indebtedness they may have contracted.

THE LIEUTENANT'S LITTLE SCHEME.

It has just transpired that the lieutenant of the Busch Zouaves, who had himself interviewed recently to the effect that the entire regiment were discontented and would go to pieces unless the citizens came down with a number of heavy subscriptions, was animated by a desire that is not exactly creditable, viewed from the standpoint of a soldier. The gay zouave, it seems, wanted the regiment to get the funds that are coming to it, not because his sympathetic heart was stirred by the poverty of his comrades, but because he wanted to create a very nice place for himself which would pay him a very nice salary. It will be remembered that the old National Guard Association, which was pretty well fixed as regards money, had an agent whose duty it was to do all the clerical work of the association. This agent was simply a clerk, but he received a good salary. Under the present regime, however, the clerical work formerly done by the agent is done by the staff officers of the regiment, each of whom does all the writing, book-keeping, correspondence, etc., that pertains to his office. The zouave lieutenant, seeing that the regiment was to be cared for by the citizens, thought that the position of agent would be created again, and not long since called on Colonel Meier to talk about the matter. Colonel Meier said he did not see any necessity for an agent when the adjutant and the staff officers could do their own work, but the lieutenant insisted that every company in the regiment was clamoring for the re-creation of the place, and intimated that if the place was to be made the boys would insist that he, the lieutenant, should be appointed to it. Here is the milk in the cocoanut. The young gentleman is now said to be running about town swearing that he will yet "down" Col. Meier. It would be a wise thing for Capt. Roemer and other cool-headed members of the Busch Zouaves to put a muzzle on this young man.

AS TO BALLS.

It has been concluded by the committee on amusements to dispense with a ball during Fair week. This conclusion was come to at a recent meeting, after the advisability of giving such a ball had been fully discussed. The committee believed that it would be unwise to call on the merchants at the present time to pay for tickets to the number of ten or more, as the merchants are already taxed to the utmost to pay the expenses of the Veiled Prophet's festivities. The ball will, therefore, not take place. A ball will be given, however, about the middle of the month, and a regimental ball will be given about once a month through the season, the expenses to be borne by the military themselves. This is considered to be the most economical and, at the same time, most successful method of giving the boys an opportunity to exercise their terpsichorean powers under the auspices of the Regiment.

THE TREDWAYS.

The announcement that First Lieutenant Comfort had resigned was received with considerable surprise last Saturday. It was thought that the resignation would not be accepted, however, and would be held by Col. Meier until the present di-sensions in the company had subsided. As a matter of fact, Mr. Comfort called on Col. Meier early in the week and insisted on its acceptance. Col. Meier indorsed the resignation and sent it to Jefferson City. Mr. Comfort received the following on Thursday:

(Special Orders No. 42.)
HEADQUARTERS, STATE OF MISSOURI, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, CITY OF JEFFERSON, October 1, 1884.

1. The resignation of First Lieutenant C. D. Comfort, Company D, First Regiment N. G. M., is accepted to take effect after this date.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

JOHN B. WADDILL,
Adjutant-General.

Mr. Comfort is now a private citizen. At a meeting of the Tredways last Wednesday night he was asked by his friends to withdraw his resignation, but this he refused to do, saying that no doubt it had been accepted by that time. An order for another election has been telegraphed for, and the order was received to-day. A meeting of the company and an election will be held Monday night, when it is conceded. Mr. Comfort will be elected captain. There is still an opposition to him, but it is hoped for the sake of the future of the company that all differences will be healed and the election be made unanimous.

THE COMING COUNCIL.

Outline of the Subjects to be Considered at Baltimore.

Additional Religious Information—Sunday Subjects—St. Agatha's New Church—Religious Notes and Personals.

The almost assured presence of Archbishop Kenrick at the primary council at Baltimore which will meet the second week in November lends a deeper interest to the deliberations of that body, and there is much inquiry as to the subjects which will engage the attention of that august body. The outline of the work before the Council as authoritatively announced shows that no official consideration will be given political affairs, and that nothing will be discussed that has not a quite direct ecclesiastical bearing. The old question of church and state will not be obtruded. Temperance will figure largely and the idea of the council will be to encourage true temperance, but not in any way to aid prohibition or any system of restraint that interferes with personal freedom. The question of schools will be brought up only to devise ways of assisting Catholic educational institutions, and nothing will be done looking to an attack upon the public school methods. The central wish will be to secure more harmony in each diocese in the matter of text books, which are now of various kinds in each diocese, this resulting in needless confusion and expense. A council will probably be recommended for each diocese to select books, etc., within their jurisdiction. The rights of the clergy, especially of the parish priest, will be much extended as regards the question of transfer; but on the other hand, their duties will be increased, in that a rule will probably be passed making it necessary for priestly candidates for certain places to stand an examination. The bishops will also be relieved by the institution of ecclesiastical courts, to which all charges against a clergyman's character must be submitted, and which will also have a voice in deciding upon his transfer. Heretofore such matters have lain wholly within the disposal of the Bishop. A rule relating to the administration of church affairs will very likely be passed, designed to preclude the possible recurrence of a scandal like the one at Cincinnati, involving Archbishop Purcell. Among the minor points which will be touched upon, will be the publishing of admonitions against divorce and recommending the sacrament of marriage, and the observance of the festivals and days of obligation in general will be made more uniform throughout the United States. As it is now one fast day here may not be the same in New York, or, for that matter, just across the river. Concerning church music, the style of Gregory the Great will be renewed as rendered by the St. Cecilia Association, and though it will not be ordered used it will certainly be strongly recommended. There will also be published suggestions about public festivals, pleasure trips and excursions, tending to the conservation of the highest propriety and good order. Immigration agents, after the manner of the Protestants, will also be established at the principal ports to look after the new arrivals. Steps will also be taken to promote the work among the negroes.

The first plenary council was held at Baltimore in 1852, and the second in 1866. Those entitled to admission to its sittings include every archbishop and abbott, prominent ecclesiastics of the other orders, and theologians of high repute. The preparations for the assembling of the divines are being made by the Board of Preparation, which is under the presidency of Archbishop Gibbon, assisted by Dr. Corcoran.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

According to a change in the programme Mrs. Robinson, the evangelist, will preach at Trinity Methodist Church, Tenth and North Market streets, to-morrow morning at 10:45, instead of at Union, where she speaks in the evening. The monthly song service occurs at Trinity in the evening.

The monthly business meeting of the East St. Louis Railway Y. M. C. A. will be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at which delegates will be chosen to represent the association at the Eighth Annual State Convention to be held at Glasgow, Mo., October 30 to November 2. The members of the Union Depot Division will meet this evening at room No. 1, Union Depot, for the transaction of business of a like character.

Rev. H. Spencer Williams, pastor North Presbyterian Church, will preach the second sermon of the "Model Household" series to-morrow morning. Communion in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. No service in the evening.

St. Thomas of Aquin Church is preparing for a grand concert on the 29th.

Subscriptions to the new $40,000 St. Agatha's Church have proved so satisfactory and encouraging that an early commencement of work is assured. The edifice will be erected on the corner of Utah and Eighth streets and will be of Gothic style. It is intended to replace the old house of worship which, originally built for school-purposes, has proved altogether too small for the rapidly growing congregation.

A VAST IMPROVEMENT.

Matters Theatrical More Encouraging.

A Week Coming With Old Favorites—Theatrical Chit-Chat—Movements of Stars—Green Room Gossip—Musical Notes.

The general business at the theaters during the past week has been in excess of that of any previous week, in spite of the exceedingly warm weather and the fact that the attendance at the Exposition has been quite double what it was at the outset. This betokens a good season; a healthy state of public taste and desire for entertainment and a spirit to patronize and give liberal support to whatever is good. In regard to poor shows and trash of the insipid and tasteless class which was so abundant last year, there is nothing to be said in the way of encouragement. The outlook is rather vaporish than rosy for such; and while a good share of rollicking fun and nonsense will be appreciated and relished, this must have some color—some salt—to make it acceptable.

At the Grand Opera Houe, Bartley Campbell's most successful drama, "My Partner," which enjoys a singular hold upon the public heart, will be presented with a cast almost identically the same which has been meeting so much success for the past two seasons. Louis Aldrich has made the leading role one of the most impressive, powerful and strongly marked characters on the American stage. Mr. Saunders is a distinctively American type of chaarcter, and it is so original and peculiar in its chief attributes as enacted by Mr. Aldrich, that there is no danger of its ever being duplicated. There are other notable, interesting and amusing characters in the play. Miss Goldthwaites, Mary Brandon and Mr. Haynes shining villain being well remembered. The scenic embellishments will be very handsome.

At Pope's, which is becoming the local home of the spectacular, Gardner and Gilmore's "Devil's Auction," will be presented. This is a magnificent production abounding in pantomine, ballet and scenic features, varied and charming. The dramatic action is clever, and the pantominist, Gus. S. Maffitt, does some of his finest and most comical work as the man donkey. A superb ballet with several distinguished premieres; a full corps of donyphees and a grand ballet corps will appear in several exquisite ballets, amongst which the "peacock ballet" is the most gorgeous. Otherwise the spectacle will be grandly produced.

At the Olympic the most successful of musical vaudevilles, "A Bunch of Keys," will fill out the week. Its immense success last season, and the hard way in which it hit the popular fancy will be repeated next week at the Olympic. Most of the old favorites remain with the company, which comprises Charles Bowser, Eugene Canfield, George Lawri, Chas. B. Stephens, Wm. Smith, Marietta Nash, Anna Brevoor, Anna Guenther, Ida Griffin, and that most charming and delightful of all vaudeville actresses, Lena Merville. Frank Sanger is still the general manager, and the absurdity is embellished with new music, dances, jokes and comicalities.

Gus Williams' "Captain Mishler" is a sequel to "One of the Finest" and represents the German-American hero as a captain of police; a promotion consequent upon good conduct and officership. It will be given at the People's to-morrow evening for the first time in St. Louis, and it abounds with Mr. Williams' peculiar specialties of song and dance and recitation. He will be supported by an excellent company.

* * *

George H. Adams, whose pantomime season at the Standard has been one of the greatest successes of the season, will return to-morrow evening to the same house and will draw a big week's business. The miniature circus, the specialists and Adams himself all make up a show which is hard to beat and which meets public appreciation perfectly.

* * *

The character of attractions at the Casino has steadily improved, and each week new gems in the vaudeville world are produced in this strictly first-class bijou variety house. The past week has been notably successful in the appearance of a very strong list of attractions, in which many new faces have been seen here for the first time. The coming week will be one long to be remembered at the Casino, for the management have secured the finest bill of variety items that have ever been seen in St. Louis. Lovers of the variety will have no reason to complain at the entertaining and enjoyable week's amusement provided for the Casino management. Among the people engaged are: Harry Parker with his dog and cat circus; William J. Mills, change artist; McKee and Collins, character artists; Flora Franks, serio-comic singer; Hines and Remington, in "Our Railroad Boarders;" Nellie Parker and Florence French, in songs; Hulmes and Orville, acrobats, are the new faces. Kitty O'Neill, the Lechner Family in Tyrolean singing, and Antoine, the slack wire performer, will continue. Donniker's Little philharmonic orchestra is an excellent feature of the Casino's success. The performances are under the sole direction of Dick Parker.

At Gregory's Dime Museum a double bill will be presented next week, it being a gala week for sightseers. The doors will be thrown open at 10 a. m., instead of 1 p. m., and the performances will continue at regular intervals till 11 p. m. Isaac Sprague, the living skeleton, who weighs but 38 pounds; two Zulus, a snake charmer, and a fascinating Gypsy fortune teller, are among the new features. The theatorium will be made doubly attractive in the excellent list of specialties presented, no less than a dozen artists appearing. The attendance the past week has been good, notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the weather.

* * *

An attractive bill sufficient to satisfy the most fastidious has been provided for Fair week, by Broadway & Treyser's museum, and the entertainment furnished is of an enjoyable and diversified nature. The new curiosities who appear here for the first time are: The Iowa farmer giant, said to be the tallest man in existence; Aggie Lolutie, the Albino queen. Among the other attractions are, Gertie Thornton, in songs and dances; the Elisworth Zouave Children, Carline Cushman, a colored warbler; Little Ella Lewis, the midget performer, and the Mungo Park, the spotted Nubian prince.

English Actors Giving Out.

Mr. Edwin Price was unable to engage in England a suitable leading man for Fanny Davenport's company who would cross the ocean for less than 10 per cent. of the gross receipts of the American tour, so he returned to New York last week and engaged Mr. Harry Lee to play Louis in "Fedora." Mr. Lee left the Effie Ellsler-Weston party yesterday, and started East to begin rehearsals in New York. Miss Davenport's company will include Messrs. Melbourne McDowell, Eugene O. Jepson, Frank Willard, Albert Delcampo, O'Kane Hills, John T. McNeary, Edmond Pembroke, Sheldon Kennicorn and Orson M. Drew; Misses Blanche Weaver and Nellie Irving. —[Boston Herald.

"Our American Cousin."

In an interview with a Boston Herald reporter the veteran Couldock recounted some facts in connection with the first production of Tom Taylor's great comedy which was first produced at Laura Keene's theater, New York, on the 18th of October, 1855. "After the comedy had been read to the company, I was offered my choice of two parts, Coyle, the lawyer, and Abel Murcot, his broken-down clerk, and Sothern was cast as Lord Dundreary. We both declined the parts, and refused to appear in the play. But Miss Keene prevailed upon us to remain, giving us both permission to do what we liked with the characters. She had no faith in the play, and did not believe it would run a week; neither did we. But it ran 140 nights—something unprecedented in those days—and was revived in May, with much the same cast, except that Mrs. John Wood played Florence. Sothern afterwards made hundreds of thousands of dollars out of it."

"You played Abel Murcot?"

"Yes. Joe Jefferson was the Asa Trenchard, Miss Keene the Florence, Edwin Varrey the Sir Edward, Milnes Levick the Lieut. Vernon, Clinton the Capt. de Boots, J. G. Burnett the Coyle, Charles Peters the Binney, McDougall the Buddicombe, Mary Wells the Mrs. Mountchessington, Effie Germon the Augusta, Mrs. Sothern the Georgina, Sara Stevens the Mary Meredith, and Miss Flynn and Mrs. Levick the Sharp and Skillet. Some of these characters were cut out in Sothern's version. It was this play, you remember, that President Lincoln was watching when he was assassinated, seven years later."

"Did you remain long at Laura Keene's, Mr. Couldock?"

"Only one season. The next I was in New Orleans with John E. Owens, and then I resumed starring and followed it, off and on, for a number of years. When Steele Mackaye organized his company for the Madison Square Theater, I was one of the first engagements he made. The theater was to have been opened in September, 1879, but the building was not finished, as expected, and the company was sent out in October to play 'The Iron Will' on the road. The house was opened with this play renamed 'Hazel Kirke,' February 4, 1880, and it ran until May 31, 1881, having 486 consecutive representations there before it was again put on the road."

Stage Splinters.

Dr. Damrosch has secured the services of Herr Goetye, the chorus master of the Imperial Opera House at Berlin, for the Metropolitan Opera House next season. Herr Goetye has been chorus master of the Berlin Opera House for the last twelve years.

William H. West, the well-known devotee of minstrelsy, of Thatcher, Primrose and West, has just purchased a fine residence in Chicago, costing $30,000.

Frank McKee has been doing yeoman service ahead of the "Pavements of Paris," which is billed for October 19, at the Olympic. Mr. McKee is a worker.

Manager Edwards of the Theater Comique has gone to Cincinnati to enter in business. He was backed in his enterprise by Col. Stone of the old Cincinnati Times.

An attractive feature of Dion Boucicault's new play "Robt. Emmett," which will be produced at Pope's shortly, is the scenery, which is full of startling mechanical effects. It is highly spoken of.

Charles Parsloe has a worthy successor in Luke Martin, who plays the Chinaman in "My Partner," to perfection. He is a capable actor and his excellent work in one of the leading characters of "The Romany Rye" is well remembered here.

Charles Bowser and Eugene Canfield, who have contributed so largely to the rousing success of "A Bunch of Keys," are still playing their original characters, and will be seen at the Olympic to-morrow night. The piece is uproariously funny.

At the People's, Mattie Vickers had an excellent house last evening, and her "Jacquine" was very warmly received. She still retains her graceful, vivacious ways, and fairly captivates her audiences with her remarkable soubrette qualities. This afternoon and to-night's performances are the last.

"Well-Fed-Dora" had another good house last evening, and Fanny Davenport's protege had made a decided impression. Fortescue has a bevy of musical maidens in his musical travesty, who are heard in a number of pretty airs. As a whole, Well-Fed-Dora is very amusing, and the star affords his share of it.

It is not generally known that Charles A. Parsloe, the boon companion of Louis Aldrich in "My Partner," has temporarily retired from the stage. He is worth about $75,000, and owns considerable property in Philadelphia and at Long Branch. He will enter the profession next season with an entirely new play, written for him by a well-known playwright.

The Court Journal warns Henry Irving that in rushing off to foreign parts when tempted by much money he may be endangering his hitherto steady hold upon a remunerative British public; that he may come back to find his place filled and himself a comparative stranger, as has happened to many men of consequence before him.

A recent London sporting paper summed up the quality of Augustin Daly's company as follows: "It is the dramatic midsummer race. The running was excellent, all the competitors keeping pretty much together. Terriss is the steward, of course; Daly the starter; Mrs. Gilbert wins by a nose; James Lewis an excellent second; Ada Rehan and John Drew good thirds evenly."

A Western circus man recently ordered a large advertising poster to be printed, and then objected because there was so much sky in it. "I ain't agoin' to advertise the sky," he said to the lithographer. "I paid you to advertise my show. Drop a few camels and stick them up there. I ain't agoin' to have all that good space run to waste."

Miss Thursby is said to have had a prosperous career in Norway. It is truly an ill wind that blows no one any good. The cholera scare drove thousands of English and American pleasure-seekers to the North from the South, and so Miss Thursby found a sympathetic audience at every place she came to, glad to meet a country woman and an excellent artist.

The Casino had a big house and the vaudeville items were very enjoyable and filled the bill in furnishing excellent entertainment. Ellis and Moore, Kitty O'Neill, the Lechtner family and the best people in their line—Hallen and Hart—were especially favored, and met with hearty applause on all sides. To-night will be the last opportunity to see this excellent company.

The Grand Opera had a very large attendance last evening, and "For Congress" with candidate John T. Raymond, was highly enjoyed. The veteran comedian was at his best, and he kept the audience in a continual uproar by his inimitable acting. The last performances will be this afternoon and to-night. "For Congress" has caught the town.

"In the Ranks," one of the strongest melodramas on the stage, had the largest house of their engagement last night, and the performance was very fine. Ned Drayton in the hands of Ed. Buckley is a master hero, full of vigor and manliness. Joe Buzzard is a very strong character, and Mr. C. D. Fisher makes the most of it. The villain, Frank Kilday, received an ovation. He was soundly hissed.

With the exception of the "Parisfal" performances, the tenth and last of which took place on August 8 and brought the series to a successful conclusion, Germany has at present not much more to boast of in the way of music than France. There have, however, been held Sangerfest (literally, festivals of singers); at Ulm with 3,000 singers, at Landshut with 1,800, at Rostock with 460, and Kiel with 1,300.

"Excelsior," Kiralfy Brothers' masterpiece of spectacular plays, will be presented for the first time in St. Louis at Pope's, immediately following the "Devil's Auction." It is produced under the personal supervision of the Kiralfys, who have met with the greatest success through out the country. An electrician especially engaged travels with the company, to properly manipulate the electric lights used in its production. It will be a revelation of spectacular grandeur.

The most brilliant assemblage of society representatives of the season, crowded Pope's to the doors last evening, and Orpheus and Eurydice was magnificently presented. It was the best performance of the week, and was handsomely received. Louis DeLang, Daisy Murdock and Vanoni were the recipients of ovations, and they entered into the spirit of the occasion with unusual zeal and force. Manager Pope and Treasurer Dickson were as happy as a newly wedded couple.

The Clipper very sensibly says: "It is becoming an important question whether theaters ought to be run by their managers or by the combinations that play in them for a night or a week. There should be but one answer. The combinations are one-half the time 'snaps.' All but a few of the most staple of them are wholly irresponsible, and even these few may never appear in the town again. The theater stays there. It can not afford to be ignored."

A hay-seed entered Robinson's one evening last week, and walking into the back row of the dress-circle, sat down on one of the chairs without turning the seat. He kept this position all through one act, to the delight of the gang who were on to him. During the intermission some one took the seat next to him and turned down the seat. The greeny looked on in amazement, and, working his the same way, settled down in it with an expression on his face which plainly said ——————.—[Enquirer.

Thatcher, Primrose, and West have been doing the largest business ever known in minstrelsy. They are fairly turning people away at their performances, and are a sort of living monument to the brisk end of a generally dull theatrical season. Among their new people this year are Wood and Beasley, Seaman and Summers, Girard Bros., and Weston Bros. Frank McNish, "the silent man," who met with great success in England, has returned, and is playing with this strong minstrel aggregation. They open at the Olympic November 19. The whole party will be the guests of George Heuer, who will look after them while in the city.

The theatrical season is in full swing in Paris. New plays are produced almost nightly. "La Nuit aux Soufflets," M. Herve's new opera comique has been given at the Nouveautes and failed dismally. The libretto, by M. Paul Ferrier, is partly to blame. It is a rehash of a forgotten comedy by M. D'Ennery, and is devoid of interest. M. Herve is out of his element in his music, which is tame, spiritless or simply vulgar. A rustic duck song, with a "quack, quack" refrain, however, won great applause. This fact is certainly due less to the composer's merit than to his interpreter, pretty Marguerite Ugalde, who has returned from Russia more bewitching than ever.

Tony Denier had a very narrow escape from serious injury on September 9, on the Guion steamship line dock in New York, whither he had gone to see his brother-in-law, Linford Horne, off for Europe. While busily engaged in conversation an awkward employe of the line rushed past Mr. Denier with a grapnel hook ladder on his shoulders, and one of the iron hooks struck Mr. Denier in the head and made a serious incision. His well-known activity served Mr. Denier well in this instance, and jumping quickly to one side and boiling with rage and smarting with pain, he would have thrashed the stevedore had the bystanders not interfered, just long enough to permit the offender to make his escape.

A New York letter says: While the Fifth Avenue and Wallack's drew the young ladies, the Bijou was given up to the young dudes, who occupied all the front seats. Saturday is the day they don't have to go to school, and having saved up their pocket money for a week they invest it in a seat in the Bijou. They sit and wink at the chorus girls in their gorgeous costumes, and if one of them should by any chance be rewarded with a smile he is immediately in the seventh heaven of delight, and he usually devotes the greater part of the coming week to writing "mash" notes and borrowing money from his school mates to send his "girl" a box of candy, and then all the other girls that dress in the same room help eat it up, and remark what a little fool he must be. "Why, Lilly, you have a son of your own as old as he is."

Mme. Janauschek, in speaking on general topics, says: "How little New York thanks me for the pains I have taken; I was earnestly pressed by Herr Werder to remain in Berlin; they wanted me there; I was to take up my classical parts, but I told them to America lay my duty. I had my play and I meant to produce it here. I would not separate myself from the American public, for I had my home here now. A Bohemian by birth, having visited all the great European capitals, having enjoyed the personal friendship of men and women high in station and in art, I have chosen to become an American citizen, and such I mean to remain. Here have I played 'Phaedra,' 'Iphigenia,' 'Mary Stuart,' 'Marie Antoinette,' 'Deborah,' 'Mother and Son,' 'Medea,' 'Adrienne Locouvreur,' 'Lady Macbeth,' 'Winter's Tale,' 'Brunnhilde,' 'Bleak House,' and other great parts, and here I mean to bring my new play to perfection, till the American public like it and admires it. I am not afraid to be well received, as I have always been, in Philadelphia, where Mr. Meredith is also known, in Boston, Chicago and other cities, and to again attract the attention of the intellectual American public."

An old-timer tells the following: "Marriage sometimes proves the ruin of a prima-donna. A notable illustration of this was poor Carolina Richings. What a strange, sad history was hers! She was the daughter of a drunken, brutal Englishman, who was the chorusmaster of Peter Richings' English Opera Company. Many a time I have seen him knock her off a piano stool with one blow of his fist. The poor girl's sufferings from the cruelty of this brute moved Richings to compassion. He adopted her as his own daughter, and she became Caroline Richings. From that time her star was in the ascendant. She gathered around her a brilliant coterie of artists, including the late Edward Seguin and his charming wife, Zelda Seguin; Wm. Castle and his inseparable friends, the late S. C. Campbell. Fame and fortune were hers. She was a favorite everywhere, and for years had the only English opera company in America. In an evil hour she married Pierre Bernard, a second or third-rate tenor. From that moment everything went wrong with her. The late Parepa Rosa organized an English opera company and engaged all Miss Richings' best people. The latter was obliged to replace them with inferior talent. One season sufficed to bankrupt her and she went steadily downward till she sank into obscurity, and died poor in Richmond, Va.

The Miss Helen Dauvray, who was reported by the cable a few days ago as having made a pronounced hit in Paris, where, although an American, she played in French, proves to be an old acquaintance, and about the last person on earth one would have expected to hear from as having accomplished the feat described. The lady's name is Helen Williams, and at one time she had a fleeting reputation in this country as a banjo-picking star of the Lotta type, going under the somewhat fanciful name of Little Nell, the California Diamond. There was an indication of paste about her, which seemed to give ample color to the appellation. She was an illiterate child, who experienced difficulty in writing her own name, and of whom there was every reason to believe she would never overcome the rudiments of her own language, not to consider a possible victory over another. Some years ago the young woman, fully realizing her own deficiencies in the matter of education, retired from the stage to learn something, and she appears to have employed her time to very good advantage, inasmuch as she is now enabled to accomplish much more than the most advanced members of her calling in America have hoped to do for themselves. It now seems altogether likely that Miss Williams will come back to America and resume acting in English, the quality whereof, it is to be hoped, has largely improved in the interval of her absence.

The affair will be complimentary, no charge being made except for the banquet. The following sub-committees were appointed: Programme and Music, J. Claude, A. E. Addor, S. A. Droz, L. F. JOHN McCULLOUGH.

A Dispatch to Captain Connor Announcing His Departure From Chicago.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—"I think the Western newspapers and the dispatches to newspapers in this city," said Captain Conner, of the St. James Hotel, last evening, "have not given a faithful account of McCullough's illness. I judge from this dispatch I received this afternoon from John B. Carson." The dispatch was: "I think stories of John's condition exaggerated. He rode out and dined with me yesterday, and seemed quite rational and reasonable." Mr. Connor had his hands full of dispatches. He said that his notion is that, while Mr. McCullough is not so violent as he is said to be, yet he is physically not fit to continue acting. Dispatches had continued to beseech Mr. Connor to start for Chicago yesterday, and he had finally made up his mind to start to-day when, late in the afternoon, Manager Brooks sent a dispatch that all the affairs of the theatrical company were settled and that Mr. Brooks would start with Mr. McCullough for either St. Louis or New York immediately. A later dispatch informed Captain Connor that they would stay in Chicago to-day and start to-morrow.

McNichols on the Home-Stretch.

"Who is he, ma?" cries little Sue,
With eyes that wildly gaze;
"The crowd gives way to let him through,
He neither stops nor stays."
"Hush, child! your ignorance I shame;
Go round about the town,
Say not you've never heard the name
That has such wide renown.

"McNichols is each baby's pride,
For but for him, you know,
In buggies fine they would not ride,
He sells on time so low.
My Parlor Suit and Folding bed
I could not show in glee,
But that McNichols went ahead
And furnished up for me.

He Passes Everything on the Road.

"Each week I pay a portion small
Of what was once a bill;
My home's the neatest one of all
That stands upon our hill.
No pretty thing is lacking there,
In furniture or lace;
My walls are hung with pictures rare,
Folks envy me the place.

"He has a stock all new and bright,
He sells the old so cheap
That buyers go from morn till night,
They're piled in ten feet deep.
His rent is low, expenses such
He can afford this rate;
He does not seek to make too much,
But just to fill his slate."

Mac. don't want the world, only wishes to sell his present splendid stock of household goods on weekly payments, to give him room for his brand new stock just opened up before an admiring public.
